

UDDHAVA GĪTĀ

Śrīmad Bhāgavatam

Canto 11 chapter 6-29

Śrī Kṛṣṇa Dvaipāyana Vyāsadeva

Translation: Anand Aadhar

third revised edition updated 2022

Uddhava Gītā

Acknowledgements:

With gratitude towards the luminaries
Bhagavān Śrī Sathya Sai Baba, Bhagavān Śrī Rajneesh (Osho)
and the Vaishnava spiritual teachers and devotees:

ŚrīlaViśvanātha Cakravartī Ṭhākura,
Śrīla Bhaktisiddhanta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura,
His Divine Grace A.C. Bhaktivedānta Swami Prabhupāda, Bhanu Swāmī Mahārāj,
Hridyānanda dāsa Goswami,
Gopīparāṇaḍhana dāsa Adhikāri,
Bhumipati dāsa,
C.L. Goswami M.A. Sāstri, Śrī Hayeśvara dāsa,
and
Sakhya Devī dāsī who always corrected everything.

Copyright: © 2022 Anand Aadhar.

For this translation the copyright applies of the Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial-Share Alike 3.0 Unported License.
This means that one is free to copy and change the text under the condition that
1) the name of Anand Aadhar is mentioned with a link to the site bhagavata.org,
2) the text is not used for any commercial purpose and that
3) the resulting work can only be distributed under the same or a likewise license.

Uddhava Gītā

UDDHAVA GĪTĀ

Śrīmad Bhāgavatam
Canto 11 chapter 6-29

Śrī Kṛṣṇa Dvaipāyana Vyāsadeva

Translation: Anand Aadhar

Third revised Edition updated 2022

CONTENTS

- Introduction - 6
- Chapter 1 - Retirement on the Advice of Brahmā and Uddhava Addressed in Private 9
- Chapter 2 - Kṛṣṇa Speaks about the Masters of the Avadhūta and the Pigeon of Attachment 14
- Chapter 3 - What One Learns from Nature and the Story of Piṅgalā 20
- Chapter 4 - Detachment from All that is Material 24
- Chapter 5 - The Soul Free, the Soul Bound 28
- Chapter 6 - Bondage and Liberation Explained and the Devotional Service of the Saintly Person 32
- Chapter 7 - The Confidential Secret Beyond Renunciation and Knowledge 37
- Chapter 8 - The Hamsa-avatāra Answers the Questions of the Sons of Brahmā 40
- Chapter 9 - The Devotional Coherence of the Methods and the Meditation on Viṣṇu 45
- Chapter 10 - Mystical Perfection: the Siddhis 50
- Chapter 11 - The Lord's Opulence 54
- Chapter 12 - The Varṇāśrama System and the Boat of Bhakti: the Students and the Householders 58
- Chapter 13 - The Varṇāśrama System: the Withdrawn and the Renounced 63
- Chapter 14 - The Perfection of Spiritual Knowledge 68
- Chapter 15 - Trikāṇḍa-Yoga: Bhakti Surpasses Knowledge and Detachment 72
- Chapter 16 - On Distinguishing between Good and Bad 76
- Chapter 17 - Prakṛti and Puruṣa: Nature and the Enjoyer 82

Chapter 18 - Forbearance: the Song of the Avantī Brāhmaṇa	88
Chapter 19 - Analytic Knowledge, Sāṅkhya, Summarized	94
Chapter 20 - The Three Modes of Nature and Beyond	97
Chapter 21 - The Song of Purūravā	101
Chapter 22 - On Respecting the Form of the Lord	104
Chapter 23 - Jñāna-Yoga or the Denomination and the Real	110
Chapter 24 - Bhakti-Yoga: the Most Auspicious Way to Conquer Death	115
- Glossary -	120

---

- Introduction -

---

Lord Kṛṣṇa, a Vedic prince who lived about five thousand years ago, is predominantly known as the speaker of the Bhagavad Gītā, the talk He delivered to his doubting friend Arjuna just before the great battle of the Mahābhārata began. With that war the Vedic age of the great kings [Dvāpara-yuga] ended and the present age of quarrel [Kali-yuga] commenced. Ever since there was no natural relationship anymore between the sages and the rulers, for reason of which the world more or less has fallen into chaos. But there is also a second talk of Kṛṣṇa in which He extensively reports about His science and nature. The second time He spoke His mind to His nephew, great friend and devotee Uddhava, just before Kṛṣṇa left the earth. This Gītā, part of the masterly frame story the Bhāgavata Purāna - the so-called Śrīmad Bhāgavatam - is of a different tone. While He in the Bhagavad Gītā admonishes Arjuna to fight and perform his duty as a warrior, Kṛṣṇa in this talk advises Uddhava on how to serve Him with devotion and find liberation when He Himself is no longer physically present on earth.

The story has a more personal ring, is more narrative with examples and dilates a bit more, even though sometimes the same or likewise verses are encountered. The story is therefore easier to read and less abstract. He first of all explains to Uddhava that he has to give up his attachments in order to find liberation in His service. Without that spiritual connectedness one is a lost, eternally bound soul condemned to return again to the material world full of misery. He teaches Uddhava to recognize Him in all and everything like a thread running through a pearl necklace, as He told Arjuna. Uddhava then states, just like Arjuna again, that he finds yoga a difficult to perform discipline and asks for further instruction. Kṛṣṇa answers that only by one's intelligence deriving from indirect symptoms one cannot attain Him, one needs to be devoted in going for the direct symptoms of His different appearances. He proceeds to give a description of a sage explaining about all the teachers he had. There is not one guru or source of knowledge in one's life. One learns from the earth, the air, the sea, the moth, the honey bee and many other teachers one meets. Kṛṣṇa mentions twenty-four of them in a few chapters and explains that knowledge acquired from a single teacher cannot be very solid or complete. The Absolute Truth of the complete whole is by the sages sung in many ways. Next He elaborates further on the details of His science. What would be health and what is liberation? What is the meaning of religious rituals and how must one meditate? What does perfection entail and what are His opulences? On the basis of what societal order can one be of service unto Him and what is all meant by the perfection of spiritual knowledge? Are there different forms of yoga and what would be the best one? What to say about the difference between good and evil? And how about the relation between the person and material nature?

Uddhava asks Kṛṣṇa how to remain calm when one is approached with negativity by others. Kṛṣṇa then relates the story of a brahmin endeavoring too frantically for material purposes and too little in respect of people. Material existence, however much one tries one's best for it, time and again results in frustrations. True happiness cannot be found that way. And thus one arrives at detachment, however lusty and prosperous one's life has been. One looks for lasting happiness after all. For that purpose one's mind must be subjected to the proper discipline of meditation. With a correct insight in matters of cause and effect one may find liberation and lasting happiness, meanwhile learning to overcome negative consequences, karmic reactions. There is no other cause of happiness and distress than the material bewilderment of one's mind. Because of that bewilderment one sees a world filled with friends and foes. One then sees Him not everywhere any longer and has lost one's way. Therefore do not judge too rashly and try to rise above the world of opposites. In transcendence one finds liberation.

Kṛṣṇa next expounds on the nature of material reality and the degree to which we are all determined by it. Everything around us, the complete of our material existence is a product of the interaction of the natural modes or qualities and functions, and the time. One has to acknowledge that there is a fourth state of consciousness next to the ones of sleeping, waking and dreamlessly being absent, an extra dimension in which one must manage to find oneself. By meditation one attains that fourth state. It is all about the stabilization of that consciousness.

Kṛṣṇa then relates another story. It is a story about an emperor turning into a complete fool the moment his wife abandons him. In his misery he arrives at understanding. Attached to female beauty and sense gratification a man fails to meet his essence. One therefore has to develop devotion unto Him so that a marriage does not become an unbearable burden and enjoyment is not a sin. Dedicate everything to Him, that is how one finds liberation.

Kṛṣṇa then clarifies how one can worship His form. One organizes rituals with a material purpose and for that reason they are associated with karmic matters. But in bhakti, His devotional service, one has to learn to live one's love free from ulterior motives, especially the love for His person and wisdom. An idol is not a purpose in itself, but rather constitutes a gateway for the purpose of realizing Him from within. It is a necessary process of material actions, just as one with clocks and calendars culturally worships His impersonal nature of time until one has retrieved His original Time, nature and natural harmony. By karma one loses oneself, by dharma one saves oneself. Karma means to suffer profit-minded labor and selflessly that is overcome. Dharma is religion and nature, and by devotion and meditation one regains that connectedness and original harmony.

Kṛṣṇa finally offers an exposition about the interest of properly discriminating between mind and matter, between soul and body. What is actually real and what is just a denomination of that what is real? It is the identification with matter that constitutes the hindrance because of which we are locked up in a false ego of 'I' and 'mine' that we take for real. Kṛṣṇa shows the way of liberation in the soul that is never alone, but is always together with Him as an eternal friend, like two birds sitting in a tree. One bird enjoys the fruits, the other one is witnessing. Once being liberated one is not that much concerned any longer about all external matters so that one, self-enlightened, is elevated above the world of opposites. Kṛṣṇa explains how one can conquer the different hindrances in one's life and how one may attain that liberation. Appease the mind by repeating His names in silence with prayer beads, thus let go of everything and finally attain Him. Even endeavoring for one's health one must ultimately give up in order to reach His destination. Kṛṣṇa concludes with a discussion of the yoga of devotion, of bhakti, as the most suitable way to overcome all hindrances. He thereto pleads for seeking association with devotees, for congregational singing, for devotional service and for the beneficial effect it has on one's character. With one's devotion one should recognize Him in each and everyone and thus overcome the burden of one's mortality...

With love and devotion,
Anand Aadhar, Enschede, Oct. 8, 2022.

- The abbreviation B.G. in the text refers to verses in the Bhagavad Gītā, numbers without B.G. refer to the Śrīmad Bhāgavatam.

---

Chapter 1 - Retirement on the Advise of Brahmā and Uddhava Addressed in Private

---

(1) Śrī Śuka said: 'Thereafter Lord Brahmā arrived [in Dvārakā] being surrounded by his sons, the gods and the lords of man. Lord Bhava [Śiva] also came, the for all living beings favorable controller, who was accompanied by a host of ghostly beings. (2-4) Also Indra, the powerful controller, and his gods [the Maruts] came, the sons of Aditi, the good souls of clarity [the Vasus], the protectors of health [the Aśvins], the artists [the Ṛbhus], the descendants of Aṅgirā, the expansions of Śiva [the Rudras], the demigods of the intellect [the Viśvedevas], of commerce [the Sādhyas], and other demigods, the singers and dancing girls of heaven [Gandharvas and Apsaras], the souls of excel [the Nāgas], the perfected souls [Siddhas] and the venerable souls [Cāranas], the treasure keepers [Guhyakas], the seers [the Ṛṣis], the forefathers [Pitas] and the scientists [Vidyādharas], as also the souls of special talents [the Kinnaras], all came together in Dvārakā eager to see Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Lord who removes the impurities everywhere in the universe, who with His transcendental form enchants the entire human society, and spreads His fame in all the worlds. (5) In that splendid city rich with a great abundance, they with their hungry eyes saw Lord Kṛṣṇa who is so wonderful to behold.

(6) After having covered the best of the Yadus with flower garlands brought from the gardens of heaven, they praised Him, the Lord of the Living Being, and expressed themselves in all kinds of amazing ideas and words. (7) The gods said: 'We with all our intelligence, senses, vital air, mind and words, bow down at Your lotus feet, oh Lord, the feet upon which they meditate in their heart who are connected in the love of striving for liberation from the powerful grip of karmic consequences. (8) You, by [engaging] the material energy consisting of the three basic qualities, create, protect and destroy the inconceivable cosmic manifestation within Yourself while being situated within those modes. [Nevertheless] You are by them not entangled in karmic activities at all, oh Unconquerable One, because You, the irreproachable Lord, are always absorbed in Your unrestricted happiness [see also B.G. 3: 22]. (9) Oh Worshipable One, the purification of those persons who have a contaminated consciousness is not as much brought about by incantations, respecting injunctions, study of the scriptures, charity, penances and rituals, oh Greatest of All, as it is caused by listening to those souls who are situated in pure goodness and have a fully matured and transcendental faith in Your glories [see also 4.29: 36-38]. (10) May there for us be Your lotus feet, the fire that annihilates our inauspicious mentality and that by sages desiring the real benefit is carried in their appeased hearts, the fire of Your four forms [of soul, ego, mind and intelligence, the caturvyūha] that three times a day is worshiped by the self-controlled devotees so as to reach beyond the [material] heavens and acquire an opulence [bhaga] like Yours. (11) On them [Your feet] they are meditating, oh Lord, who, having folded their hands, pour the ghee they took into the fire of sacrifice in the [nirukta] process of understanding the three Vedas. On them the yoga practitioners are meditating who, inquisitive about Your [yoga-]māyā mystic potency, are united in the realization of the True Self. [But] they are fully attained [only] by the most elevated devotees [see uttama and 11.2: 45-47]. (12) With the withered flower garland that we offer You, Your Lordship's consort Śrī [dwelling there], oh Almighty One, feels challenged like a jealous co-wife, for You accept this offering as being properly performed [see also B.G. 9: 26]. May there always be Your lotus feet, the fire that consumes our impure desires! (13) Your feet that like flags decorating flagpoles with three mighty steps [defeat the possessiveness and bring down the water of the Ganges] in each of the three worlds [see 8.20], create fear among the armies of the demons and fearlessness among the troops of the God-fearing souls. For the virtuous souls they are there for the attainment of heaven and for the mischievous ones they are there for exactly the opposite, oh Most Powerful One. May these feet, oh Supreme Lord, free us, Your worshipers, from our sins. (14) Brahmā and all the other embodied beings have their existence like oxen bound by a rope through their nose. Being controlled by Time they trouble each other. May the lotus feet of You, the Supreme Personality transcendental to both material nature and the individual person, bring us transcendental happiness [compare 1.13: 42, 6.3: 12]. (15) You are the cause of the creation, maintenance and annihilation of this [universe]. You are the cause of the unseen, of the individual soul and of the complete whole of the manifest reality. They say that You, this very same personality, are the time factor controlling all, who appears as a wheel divided in three [summer, winter and spring/autumn]. One says that You are the Supreme Personality who, in the form of Time, uninterrupted in Your flow effects the decay of everything [*]. (16) The living being [beginning with Mahā-Viṣṇu] acquires its power [potency] from that [time aspect] of Yours. You establish the vastness of matter with it [mahat-tattva]. United with that same nature You therefrom generate - the way an ordinary fetus is produced - the golden primeval egg of the universe endowed with its [seven] outer layers [see kośa]. (17) You are therewith the original Controller of everything that moves and keeps its place. You after all, are in Your activities, oh Master of the Senses, never affected Yourself by the change of the objects of the senses that presents itself because of the operating modes of nature. Others by contrast, engaged of their own accord [in austerities], having turned away live in fear [see also B.G. 16: 23-24]. (18) Your sixteen thousand wives were enchanting every time they launched the arrows of Cupid by showing their feelings with their eyebrows, smiles and glances. But they were not able to perturb Your senses by all the methods of their messages and advances of conjugal love [see also 1.11: 36]. (19) The rivers of nectar of Your stories and the rivers resulting from the bathing of Your feet, can put an end to all the impurities of the three worlds. Those who strive for purification and seek association, approach [You therefore] in two places: by making their ears listen to the stories the tradition offers [in the temples] and by bringing their bodies [in the rivers] in contact with the water that flows from Your feet.'

(20) The honorable son of Vyāsa [Śuka] said: 'After he who commands hundreds [of sages, Brahmā] together with Śiva and the demigods thus had praised Govinda, the Supreme Lord, he addressed Him offering his obeisances from his position in the sky. (21) Śrī Brahmā said: 'Oh Lord, we requested You previously to diminish the burden of the earth. Oh Unlimited Soul, You have fulfilled that request the way we wanted it. (22) Having established the principles of dharma among both the pious souls and the seekers of truth, it is indeed Your glory, spread by You in all directions, that removes the impurity of all the worlds. (23) For the benefit of the universe assuming a form and descending in the Yadu dynasty, You with magnanimous deeds have performed incomparable activities. (24) Oh Lord, those saintly souls who in the age of Kali hear and chant about Your activities, will easily overcome the darkness [see also 10.14]. (25) Oh Supreme Personality, since Your descent in the Yadu-vaṁśa one hundred and twenty-five autumns have passed, oh Master. (26-27) Oh You, Foundation of Everything, for You there is no longer any obligation to the God-fearing souls, and the remaining part of the dynasty has factually been annihilated by this curse of the brahmins [see 11.1]. Therefore we ask You whether You intend to leave for Your Supreme Abode, and if You please want to protect us, the servants of Vaikuṅṭha and the guardians of all worlds and their inhabitants.'

(28) The Supreme Lord said: 'I have understood what you said, oh controller of the demigods. All the work has been accomplished for your sake; the burden of the earth has been removed. (29) This same Yadu family that [with My appearance has] expanded its power, courage and opulence, threatened to devour the entire world and has therefore been checked by Me, just like an ocean is checked by its shore. (30) If I would not withdraw the vast dynasty of overly proud Yadus, this world would be destroyed by that flood. (31) Because of the brahmins' curse, right now the annihilation of the family has begun. After that has taken place, oh sinless Brahmā, I will pay a visit to your abode.'

(32) Śrī Śuka said: 'Thus being addressed by the Lord of the World, the self-born one fell down at His feet to offer Him his obeisances. The godhead then returned to his abode together with the different gods. (33) The Supreme Lord thereafter observed the development of serious portents in the city of Dvārakā. He spoke to the assembled Yadu elders. (34) The Supreme Lord said: 'These very serious disturbances appearing everywhere are a consequence of the curse the brahmins pronounced against our family, it is impossible to counteract. (35) We should not stay here if we want to continue with our lives. Let us not delay, oh venerable souls, and this very day go to Prabhāsa, that so very pious place [**]. (36) The king of the stars [the moon god] who was seized by consumption because of a curse of Dakṣa, once took a bath there, was immediately freed from his offense and resumed the waxing of his phases. (37-38) When we also bathe there to the satisfaction of the forefathers, offer different kinds of foodstuff to the demigods and the venerable scholars, and also distribute gifts with faith in them as being worth the charity, we will overcome the terrible danger, just as one with boats crosses the ocean.'

(39) Śrī Śuka said: 'Oh child of the Kurus, the Yādavas who were thus instructed by the Fortunate One, decided, after due consideration, to go to the holy site and yoked their horses to their chariots. (40-41) Oh King, Uddhava [see also 3.2 and 10.46 & 47], as an ever faithful follower of Kṛṣṇa, happened to hear what the Lord had said. Facing the fearful evil omens [see also 1.14: 2-5] he approached the Lord of the lords of the universe in private, and addressed Him with folded hands bowing down his head at His feet. (42) Śrī Uddhava said: 'Oh Lord and God of Gods, oh Master of Yoga, oh Piety of Hearing and Singing, You are about to withdraw this family now and give up this world. Even though You as the Supreme Controller are very well capable of it, You are not willing to counteract the curse of the brahmins! (43) Oh Keśava, I cannot even for half a moment tolerate to give up Your lotus feet, please take me with You to Your abode [see also 3.29: 13]! (44) Your pastimes are supremely auspicious, oh Kṛṣṇa, they are nectar to the human ear. Once people have the taste of them, they forsake all desire for other things. (45) How can we, who were always devoted to You when we were lying down, sitting, walking, standing, bathing, recreating and eating, and such, ever abandon You, our dear most Self? (46) Eating the food remnants and adorned with the garlands, fragrances, garments and ornaments that You enjoyed, we, Your servants, will conquer the illusory energy for certain. (47) The but in air clad sinless, peaceful members of the rerenounced order, who as sages of strict observance always send their seed upwards, go to the abode known as Brahman [see ūrdhva retaḥ and also 10.2: 32]. (48-49) We on the other hand, oh Greatest of All Yogis, who in this world wander on the paths of fruitive labor, will together with Your devotees pass beyond the hard to conquer darkness, by discussing the topics that make us remember and glorify Your deeds, words, movements, broad smiles, glances and Your amorous sports after the example of the human world.'

(50) Śrī Śuka said: 'Thus being informed, oh King, the Supreme Lord, the son of Devakī, for a long time spoke in private with His dear servant Uddhava.'

*: Time in three can be regarded as the three types of seasons - summer, winter and spring/autumn, or as the three to the order, the cakra, of the sun, the moon and the stars, or as the past, the present and the future, and also as the time of nature, culture and the psychological experience [see also trikālika, 5.22: 2, time quotes and B.G. 10: 30 & 33, 11: 32].

** : Prabhāsa is a famous holy place located near the Veraval railway station, within the region of Junagarah. At the base of the same pippala tree under which Lord Kṛṣṇa was reported to have reposed, there is now a temple. One mile away from the tree, on the seashore, there is the Vīra-prabhañjana Maṭha, and it is said that from this point the hunter Jarā fired the arrow that marked the end of His earthly presence [as described in the last two chapters of this Canto].

---

Chapter 2 - Kṛṣṇa Speaks about the Masters of the Avadhūta and the Pigeon of Attachment

---

(1) The Supreme Lord said: 'That what you said to Me, oh greatly fortunate one [Uddhava], is indeed My plan [to withdraw the dynasty]. Brahmā, Bhava and the leaders of the worlds, are looking forward to see me back in My abode [see 11.6: 26-27]. (2) I have completed My task here for the sake of the God-conscious souls [to diminish the burden of the earth], for which I, upon the prayers of Lord Brahmā, have descended together with My partial expansion [Balarāma]. (3) Because of the curse [of the brahmins] this family will certainly find its end. It will be destroyed in a mutual quarrel, and on the seventh day [from now] the ocean will inundate this city [Dvārakā]. (4) Oh man of virtue, when I have abandoned this world, it will soon fall victim of Kali and be bereft of all piety [see also 1.16 & 17]. (5) After I have left, you certainly should not stay here, oh gentle soul, for in Kali's time the people on earth will take pleasure in misconduct. (6) With your mind fully fixed on Me, you should in fact forsake all emotional ties with your family and friends, and being equal towards all wander around in this world [see B.G. 6: 9, 6: 29, 14: 22-25]. (7) This world you think of, talk about, look at, listen to and such, you should consider a transitory presentation of matters, a game of shadows that captures your imagination [see also 10.40: 25]. (8) Someone not [spiritually] connected, is confused about many values and assumes things to be right or wrong. Thus considering good and evil he makes a difference between right action, no action and wrong action [he judges, see further B.G. 4: 16]. (9) Consider therefore, with your senses under control and your mind connected, this world as situated within the Self that expanded everywhere, and that Self as being situated in Me, the Supreme Lord. (10) Fully endowed with knowledge and wisdom, being satisfied in one's mind and of understanding with the Self that for every embodied soul constitutes the object of affection, one is never discouraged by hindrances. (11) Having risen above the two of [right and] wrong, he does not turn away from what is forbidden, thinking it is bad, nor does he engage in what is enjoined because of considering it good - like a young child he does not judge. (12) When one, firmly being fixed in knowledge and wisdom, sees the universe as being pervaded by Me and peacefully, as a well-wisher, acts towards all living beings, one will never again fall into [the] misfortune [of repeated births].'

(13) Śrī Śuka said: 'Oh King, after thus by the Supreme Lord having been instructed, the exalted and fortunate Uddhava, eager to learn about the supreme principle, bowed down to the Infallible Lord to offer his obeisances and spoke. (14) Śrī Uddhava said: 'Oh Lord of Yoga, oh Unity keeping us together, oh Essence of uniting in consciousness and Source of mystical power, You spoke to my advantage about the forsaking as is known in the renounced order [sannyāsa]. (15) This renunciation is difficult to perform, my Lord, when one is dedicated to [the not regulated love of one's] lust and sense gratification, in particular when one is not devoted to You, I think [compare B.G. 6: 33-34]. (16) With my consciousness merged with the body and its relations, as arranged by Your māyā, I am thus foolish [being caught in the notion] of 'I' and 'mine'. Teach me therefore, so that Your servant may easily perform according to the process You teach. (17) Who else is there but You, who are of the Truth and personally reveal Yourself to me? Who else but my Lord, the Supreme Soul, does actually qualify for this? Not even among the awakened souls I find such a one. Everyone up to the one led by Brahmā, is in his consciousness an embodied soul who, when he takes the external world for substantial, is bewildered by Your māyā. (18) I who with my mind, in renunciation am tormented by distress, approach You therefore for shelter Nārāyaṇa, oh Friend of Man, oh You perfect, unlimited and omniscient Lord ever fresh in Your abode of Vaikuṇṭha.'

(19) The Supreme Lord said: 'Human beings well acquainted with the state of affairs in this world, generally deliver themselves, with the help of their own intelligence, way constitutes his own guru because he, with the help of his reasoning and direct perception [his self-instruction], may find his [real] benefit. (21) They who are wise and experienced with the order of [sāṅkhya or analytic] yoga, can see Me in their human existence, clearly manifested in My full glory, with all My energies [see also Kapila]. (22) Many types of bodies have evolved with one, two, three, four or more legs, or with none at all. The human form among these is the one most dear to Me [see also 3.29: 30, 6.4: 9]. (23) In this world being situated in such a body, one may look for Me, the Supreme Controller, by following direct signs [in bhakti listening and meditating] with the help of one's qualities of perception [intelligence, mind and senses]. [But in mere jñāna] by logical reasoning following indirect symptoms [- the ones of My creation -], I cannot be perceived [as a person and am even rejected, see also 2.2: 35, 2.9: 36]. (24) Concerning this one cites the following ancient story of a conversation between the oh so mighty king Yadu and an avadhūta.

(25) Yadu, who was well versed in the dharma, once saw a young brahmin mendicant wandering around unafraid of anything and took the opportunity to ask him questions [see also 7.13]. (26) Śrī Yadu said: 'How did you acquire this extraordinary intelligence, oh brahmin? How can you, fully cognizant not being engaged in any work, travel the world with the confidence of a child? (27) People who are religious, work for an income, gratify their senses and pursue knowledge, are normally endeavoring for the purpose of opulence, a good name and a long life. (28) You however, capable, learned, experienced, handsome and eloquent as you are, are not a doer and do not desire a thing, like a stupefied, maddened, ghostly creature. (29) Everyone burns in the forest fire of lust and greed, but you stand, to be free from the fire, like an elephant in the Ganges and are not burned. (30) We ask you, oh brahmin, to please tell us what the cause is of the inner happiness that you, living all by yourself, experience without any form of material enjoyment.'

(31) The Supreme Lord said: 'The brahmin thus being asked and honored by the greatly fortunate and intelligent Yadu, who out of his respect for brahmins humbly bowed his head, then spoke. (32) The honorable brahmin said: 'There are many spiritual masters I took shelter of by my intelligence, oh King. Having learned to understand through them I now, being freed, wander around in this world. Please listen to their description. (33-35) The earth, the air, the sky, the water, the fire, the moon and the sun, the pigeon, the python, the sea, the moth, the honeybee and the elephant, the honey thief, the deer, the fish, the prostitute [Piṅgalā], the osprey and the child, the girl, the arrow maker, the serpent, the spider and the wasp, are my twenty-four spiritual masters, oh King. From studying their actions I in this life have learned everything about the Self. (36) Listen, oh son of Nāhuṣa [or Yayāti], oh tiger among men, I shall tell you what I have learned from each of them separately.'

(37) From the earth I learned the rule that a learned person should not deviate from the path and keep steady, however much he is harassed by his fellow living beings who simply follow what is arranged by fate. (38) From the mountain one must learn to be always there for others, that one must devote all one's actions to the welfare of others. In following the example of a tree, for a pious person to be dedicated to others [see Śrī Śrī Śikṣāṣṭaka-3] constitutes the sole reason for his existence [see also 10.22: 31-35 and B.G. 17: 20-22].

(39) A sage should be happy with the mere movement of his vital air and not seek his satisfaction in sense gratification. His spiritual knowing will thus not be lost and his mind and speech will not be distracted. (40) A yogi free from selfhood should, just like the wind, never get entangled in relating to the objects of the senses and all their different favorable and unfavorable qualities. (41) When a self-realized soul has entered different bodies made of earth [elements] in this world and is endowed with their different qualities, he, well aware of himself, will not connect himself with these qualities, just like the wind does not with different odors.

(42) A sage should meditate on the soul stretched out in all moving and nonmoving living beings, and thereby, with his different contacts [embodiments], consider himself a pure spirit, equal to the ether that expands everywhere [see also B.G. 2: 24, 3: 15, 6: 29-30, 9: 6, 11: 17, 12: 3-4 and 13: 14]. (43) Just as the realm of the ether is not touched by the winds that blow the clouds, a person [in his real self] is not affected by his physical bodies consisting of fire, water and earth, that are moved by the basic qualities of nature created by Time.

(44) A sage who by nature is a pure, softhearted, sweet and gentle place of pilgrimage for human beings, sanctifies, just like water, the souls who gather [the friends], by being seen by them, touched and honored [see also sākhya].

(45) Brilliant, glowing and immovable because of his austerity, he who only eats when it is necessary is connected in the soul. Even when he eats everything [and thus goes beyond necessity], he does not lose his purity, just like a fire does not [irrespective of what it consumes]. (46) Sometimes [like a fire under ashes being] concealed, sometimes being manifested and being worshipable to those who desire the real benefit, he [the sage, when he serves as their guru] always enjoys their offerings and burns both their past and subsequent [present] misfortune [see also 10.81: 4 and B.G. 3: 14]. (47) The Almighty One assumes the identity of each after, just like fire appearing in firewood, having entered the different types of bodies of the higher and lower life forms He created by His potency ['true' and 'untrue' ones, god or animal].

(48) The state of the body [one undergoes] from one's birth until one's death, changes by the course of Time that itself cannot be seen; it is the body that changes, not the soul, just as the phases of the moon [change, but not the moon itself, B.G. 2: 13, 2: 20]. (49) Just as with flames [which one cannot see apart] from a fire, individual souls cannot be seen separately from the bodies that constantly die and are born again, also the [absolute of] Time itself cannot be seen, despite [the relativity of] its speeding, compelling stream [*].

(50) A yogi with his senses accepts and forsakes sense objects depending the moment [according to the cakra order] and does not attach to them, just as the sun, with its rays engaged in [evaporating and returning] bodies of water, is not ruled by them. (51) When the sun seems to have fallen apart in its reflections one, unless one is dull-witted, does not consider its original form as being different. Similarly the soul, despite of having entered in reflections [of different selves], is not seen as different.

(52) One should never lose oneself in too much affection or close association with anyone, because thus indulging one will suffer great distress, just like a foolish pigeon [see also 7.2: 50-56]. (53) A certain pigeon once in the forest built its nest in a tree and dwelt there for some years with a female companion. (54) The pigeons, with their hearts full of love, lived a householder's life whereby their glances, bodies and minds were tied to each other [like with ropes]. (55) Trusting each other making love, they in the trees of the forest were engaged in resting, sitting, walking, standing, communicating, playing, eating, and so on. (56) Whatever she would like, oh King, was what he, desirous to please her, did. He mercifully catered to all her desires, even when it was difficult, and had no control over his senses. (57) The chaste female pigeon got pregnant for the first time and delivered, in due course, in the nest the eggs in the presence of her husband. (58) From them at the appropriate time the little ones hatched with the tender limbs and feathers that were created by the inconceivable potencies of the Lord. (59) The couple then, most pleased, nourished their progeny, to which they compassionately listened to the awkward sounds of the chirping children that surrounded them. (60) To see the little ones happy, with their fluffy wings, their endearing chirping and their activities of jumping up to fly, filled the parents with joy. (61) With their hearts bound together by their affection, they, not giving it any further thought, completely being bewildered by the illusory potency of Viṣṇu, fed their children, their offspring. (62) One day the two heads of the family left for finding food for the children and wandered far away, most anxiously searching all around in the forest. (63) Some hunter, who happened to pass through the forest, saw the young birds moving near their nest and caught them with a net he had spread. (64) The male and female pigeon, who were always eagerly engaged in taking care of their children, thereupon returned to the nest to bring them food. (65) The female pigeon saw that the little ones born from her, her children, were trapped in the net and rushed forward, in utter distress crying out to them who were also crying. (66) Bound to her love constantly she had looked after her children without a thought for herself, and so she, overwhelmed by the māyā of the Unborn One, forgot about herself and was also trapped in the net. (67) The unfortunate male pigeon most miserably mented that his children and his wife, so much alike him, had been caught. They were more dear to him than his life: (68) 'Alas, just see how I, so unintelligent and of little merit, find my destruction. Unfulfilled I failed in my life's purpose and have ruined my family life, the threefold path [of the puruṣārṭas]! (69) She who suitable and faithful accepted me as her husband, as her god, has gone to heaven with her saintly children, leaving me behind in an empty house. (70) What now is the purpose of my life with my wife and children dead? What should I live for, miserable and wretched living in an empty nest?' (71) Seeing them caught within the net, still in the grip of death, he in misery sat motionless, and empty minded also landed in the net. (72) The ruthless hunter who had achieved his purpose, took the householder, his children and his pigeon wife, and headed for his home.

(73) A family man who dissatisfied with the soul takes pleasure in material opposites [like that of man and wife], will [unmeditated] suffer greatly with his relatives, just like this bird so miserable in maintaining its family. (74) A person who achieved the human position, but with the door of liberation wide open, is attached to family affairs like this bird, may, to whatever height he might have reached, be considered fallen [see also 3.30, 3.32: 1-3, 4.28: 17, 5.26: 35, 7.14, 7.15: 38-39, 7.15: 67, 8.16: 9 and 10.69: 40].'

*: This analytic method, of in this case returning to the subject of the fire after having introduced the next subject of the moon, is called siṃhāvalokana, or 'the lion's glance', by which one simultaneously proceeds forward and casts backward glances to see whether anything has been overlooked.

---

Chapter 3 - What One Learns from Nature and the Story of Piṅgalā

---

(1) The honorable brahmin said: 'Since there is sensual happiness, oh King, in both heaven and hell and also feelings of unhappiness exist for all embodied beings [as their counterpart], an intelligent person should not desire such happiness [see B.G. 2: 14].

(2) He should eat, as passive as a python, what is acquired accidentally, whether it is much or little, tasteless or pure and delicious food [7.13: 37-38]. (3) When no food is coming he, just like a big python that eats whatever providence provides, should lie down and fast for many days [7.15: 15]. (4) Both physically and mentally being strong, he, even though endowed with senses, should stay free from desire and, resting [but] clear-minded, carry his body without engaging in action.

(5) A sage is pleasing, grave, unfathomable, unlimited, unsurpassable [in his knowing] and never disturbed, just like the calm waters of the ocean [see also B.G. 12: 15]. (6) Someone wise who accepts Nārāyaṇa as the One Supreme, does not dry up or swell, just like the ocean with its rivers, whether he flourishes to his liking or is penniless [B.G. 2: 70].

(7) When someone who did not conquer his senses, sees a woman, he is tempted by that seductive illusory energy of the Lord and lands in darkness, just like a moth lands in the fire. (8) Upon seeing the by māyā produced clothing, golden ornaments and so on of the women, a person lacking in discrimination will, with his desire for sense-gratification, feel aroused by lusty desires and no doubt lose his spiritual bearings, just like a moth is destroyed [B.G. 2: 62-63].

(9) A sage has to practice the occupation of a honeybee by going door to door, without giving trouble, and only eat little bits of food, just enough to keep the body alive [5.5: 3, 7.2: 11-13, 7.12: 6, 7.14: 5, 7.15: 15 and B.G. 4: 21]. (10) Just like a honeybee obtains its nectar from small and large flowers, a well versed man must extract the [Vedic] essence from both the smallest and the largest scriptures [11.7: 23, B.G. 15: 15]. (11) With the belly as his container and the hand as his plate he should, not being a collector like a honeybee, accept food in charity and not keep it for the night or the next day. (12) A mendicant should not collect for the night or the following day, because he, just like a honeybee [collecting more and more], will lose himself thereby [in excess].

(13) A mendicant must not touch a girl, not even with his foot, nor one of wood, because he otherwise will be captured by the physical contact, just like an elephant in the grip of a she-elephant. (14) A man of intelligence should never try to get a woman, because he otherwise may find himself killed [because of a rival], the way an elephant will be destroyed by other elephants superior in strength.

(15) Riches that with great difficulty are accumulated by a greedy person who neither enjoys them himself nor shares them with others, are rather enjoyed by someone else who steals them away, just like the honey collector does upon discovering honey [see also 5.13: 10]. (16) The way a honey thief is the first one to enjoy the honey that was painstakingly collected, also the ascetic is the first one to enjoy the eagerly desired blessings of the wealth that with a lot of trouble was acquired by householders [see e.g. 1.19: 39 and 7.14: 17].

(17) An ascetic moving through the forest should not listen to worldly songs; he should learn from the deer that was captured for being fooled by the hunter's call [see the bhajans]. (18) Taking pleasure in common dancing, musical entertainment and songs, R̥ṣyaśṛṅga, the son of Mṛgī ['deer'], was subdued by women, like he was a plaything [see *, 5.8 and 5.25: 11].

(19) The way a fish that follows its taste with no intelligence is hooked and finds its death, also a person, most harassed being fooled by what the tongue dictates, may against his better judgement waste his life. (20) Sages [even] who are of self-restraint quickly conquer the material senses, except however for the tongue, the desire of which increases with the fasting [see prasādam prayer]. (21) A human being not in control of his tongue but in control of his other senses, is not of self-control. But, when someone has conquered his tongue, he has mastered them all [see also 8: 16 and B.G. 2: 59].

(22) In the city of Videha there used to be a prostitute called Piṅgalā. Oh son of kings, learn now from me something I learned from her. (23) She one night as a prostitute stood outside her door showing off her beautiful figure to get a customer into her house. (24) Oh best among men, desiring money she looked at all the men passing in the street and thought: 'Oh this lover can pay the price, that one is wealthy enough.' (25-26) With them coming and going thus subsisting on selling her love, she thought: 'Maybe some guy carrying plenty will approach me for love and give me a bundle...' Giving thought to this vain hope, while standing in the doorway and spoiling her sleep, walking down the street and returning to the house, it became midnight. (27) As she sadly dropped her face in her desire for money, her anxiety started to give way to a supreme detachment that brought her happiness. (28) Please hear from me the song she sang after this disgust of her mind, a detachment that is like a sword to the ties of someone's hopes and desires. (29) Dear King, a person who has not developed detachment is not willing to give up his physical ties, just as a human being lacking in wisdom is not willing to give up his [claims of] ownership. (30) Piṅgalā said: 'See how greatly illusioned I am! I must be out of my mind, making a fool of my self in my lust to desire useless pleasures from a lover. (31) Being ignorantly devoted to a most insignificant and unsatisfactory lust that only leads to illusion, grief, distress, misery and fear, I have refrained from the love of Him, the Eternal One bringing welfare, most dear and close to me. (32) Oh, uselessly subjecting my soul to torture, I engaged as a prostitute, the most reprehensible of all occupations! Desiring money and sexual pleasure, I sold my body to greedy, lusty, pitiable womanizers. (33) What other woman would devote herself [so] to this house with nine doors, full of stool and dripping urine, that is constructed with the bones of a spine, the ribs, hands and legs, and is covered by a skin, hair and nails [compare B.G. 5: 13 and 4.25-28]? (34) Among the residents of Videha I am the one as foolish of intelligence to desire, most unfaithful lusting, another man than Him who gives us the Soul, Acyuta. (35) When I pay the price of giving myself to Him, the well-wisher who is the one most dear, the Lord and Soul of all embodied beings, I will enjoy with Him, just like [the goddess] Ramā. (36) How little happiness did the sensual pleasure give me and the men who pleased my senses! The enjoyment of having a man or [even the grace of] the has, being spread in time, all its beginning and its end. (37) I who so stubbornly went for pleasure, therefore with my disgust somehow must have pleased the Supreme One, Lord Vishnu, who brings the happiness I now experience! (38) Had I been unlucky, there would not have been this misery leading to disgust, this loathing that makes someone relinquish his bondage and find [real] peace [compare 1.8: 25]. (39) Having refrained from cherishing vain hope in my addiction to sensual pleasures, I now approach Him for shelter and accept devotedly the great help that He, the Original Lord, offers me. (40) Fully satisfied being convinced that I thus can handle whatever comes my way, I will succeed in living and enjoying just with Him, the Self of love and the Happiness that is certain. (41) When one has fallen in the well of a material existence, by sensual pleasures has been robbed of one's insight and is caught in the grip of the snake of Time, who else but the Original Lord, would deliver one's soul [see also 10.34]? (42) The moment a soul attentively sees the universe as being seized by the snake of Time, he, being sober, will detach from everything material and be fit to serve as his own protector.'

(43) The honorable brahmin said: 'Thus being determined to put an end to the desperation caused by her desire for lovers, she sat down on her bed, having found inner peace. (44) The greatest unhappiness results from [material] desires and the greatest happiness from the absence of them. Therewith putting an end to her hope for a lover, Piṅgalā [finally] slept happily.'

*: Ṛṣyaśṛṅga, meaning 'deer-horn' to the deer that is musically attracted, was the young son of the sage Mṛgī, intentionally brought up by his father in an atmosphere of complete innocence. Mṛgī Ṛṣi thought that if his son was never exposed to the sight of women, he would always remain a perfect brahmacārī. But by chance the inhabitants of the neighboring kingdom, who were suffering from a long-term drought, received divine advice that rain would return to their kingdom only after the brāhmaṇa named Ṛṣyaśṛṅga stepped foot in it. Therefore they sent beautiful women to the hermitage of Mṛgī to entice Ṛṣyaśṛṅga and bring him back with them. Since Ṛṣyaśṛṅga had never even heard about women, he easily fell for their trap [quoted from pp. 11.8: 18].

---

Chapter 4 - Detachment from All that is Material

---

(1) The honorable brahmin said: 'When one strives to own all the things held dear by man [a house, a wife, goods etc.], that will be a source of unhappiness. Anyone who knows this and is of detachment, achieves unlimited happiness.

(2) A large hawk [the osprey] who had a prey, was attacked by others who were very strong and without meat. The moment he gave up his [desire for] prey, he achieved happiness.

(3) I am not concerned with honor or dishonor, nor do I know the worries of people with a house and children. I wander around in the world like a child, sporting and enjoying the soul only. (4) There are two types of people free from anxiety and merged in great happiness: those who are childish and foolish, and those who reached [the Lord] beyond the natural modes.

(5) Once, at the house of a young girl all of whose relatives [that day] had gone to another place, a couple of men arrived who wanted to marry her. She received them with great hospitality. (6) Being alone she beat the rice so that her guests could eat, and doing so the conch shell bracelets on her arms made a lot of noise. (7) Shy she, filled with shame, thought about that [servant] noise and then intelligently one by one broke the shell bracelets from her arms, leaving but two on each wrist. (8) From those two there was still the noise of course as she was husking the rice, but after she further removed one from each pair of shell ornaments, only one remained and no sound could be heard anymore. (9) Oh subduer of the enemy, I, wandering around in all regions searching for the truth about the world, personally witnessed the lesson taught by this girl. (10) When there are many people in one place there will be discord; even among two people there will be arguing. Therefore one should live alone, just like the bracelet of the girl. (11) The mind should be controlled by detachment and a regulated yoga practice [vairāgya and abhyāsa], in which one conquers one's breathing in sitting postures and one carefully focusses on one point [the true self, see also B.G. 6: 10-15 and 6: 46-47]. (12) When the mind thus has been stabilized one, step by step, is freed from its contamination of karma and sees the quality of goodness increase, while passion and ignorance recede. Free from fuel [for one's karma] one attains beatitude [nirvāna, see also B.G. 6: 26 and 14: 6-8].

(13) When one is thus being fixed in the soul, one does not know anything about what is outside or inside, just like the arrow maker who absorbed in his arrow did not notice the king standing at his side [see B.G. 7: 27-28].

(14) A sage must walk alone without a fixed residence [or temple], must very alert exercise restraint and should not be recognized in his actions. Without companions he speaks only little. (15) Building a home for one's temporary self is a vain and troublesome endeavor. A serpent happily prospers having entered a home built by others [see also B.G. 4: 18].

(16) The one Self, the One Lord without a second who became the Foundation and Reservoir of All, is Nārāyaṇa, the Godhead who by His own potency created the universe in the beginning and by His potency of Time withdraws His creation within Himself at the end of the kalpa. (17-18) When the material powers of sattva and so on, are balanced by the time factor that is the potency of the True Self [the Soul, the Lord], the Original Personality, the puruṣa is found as the Supreme Controller, the Lord of both primary nature [pradhāna] and the person. He, the worshipable object of all conditioned and transcendental souls, has His existence in the purest experience that one describes as kaivalya [or beatitude], the fulness of the blissful state without [guṇa] attributes [see also B.G. 7: 5 and *]. (19) By means of the pure potency of His Self, His own bewildering energy composed of the three basic qualities, He, oh subduer of the enemies, at the onset of creation agitating [in the form of Time], manifests the plan of matter [the sūtra, the thread, the rule or direction of the mahat-tattva, see also 3.26: 19]. (20) This universe, in which the living being finds its existence [of repeated births], is strung and bound to that [thread, that plan], that manifested itself as the cause of the three modes, that [in their turn] bring about the different categories of the manifestation, so one says [see also B.G. 7: 7]. (21) The way a spider expands its thread from itself, with that thread by its mouth enjoys [its meal] and swallows that thread again, the Supreme Lord also operates.

(22) Whether a conditioned soul out of love, hate or fear, with intelligence fixes his mind on a particular form of existence, he will attain that existence [see B.G. 8: 6]. (23) Oh King, a wasp larva, meditating on the fully grown wasp that put him in the hive, reaches without leaving his previous body [by transformation] the same state of being when fully grown.

(24) This is what I know from taking instruction from all these gurus. Now please, oh King, hear from me what I have to say about the knowledge I acquired by learning from my own body. (25) With one's body one always has to suffer because of the inevitable burden of its maintenance and future destruction. I contemplate the truths of the world with it and the body is therefore, despite being there for the service of others, to me a teacher of renunciation and discrimination who convinces me to wander about in detachment. (26) Wishing to give it pleasure, one has to divide one's care over the different departments of the wife, the children, the animals, the servants, the home and the relatives. Just as in nature a tree drops the seed that was produced and dies, the body at the time of death must give up the wealth it with great struggle accumulated. (27) One moment the tongue distracts the cherished body and sometimes thirst is doing this, the other moment the genitals distract and then the sense of touch is pressing, the belly demands attention, the ears lead elsewhere, the smell points in a direction or the fickle eyes are leading astray. The operating forces of the body are thus pulled in many directions, just like the head of a household is, being led by many co-wives. (28) After He from His powers had created the many different physical forms of the crawling creatures [the insects], the mammals, birds, snakes and so on, the Lord, in His heart not satisfied with it, created the human life form that He endowed with an intelligence fit for envisioning the Absolute Truth, and that brought Him gladness. (29) After many births having attained this human form that is so difficult to attain and, though not eternal, has a great value, someone in control of himself but doomed to die, must as long as he has not ended, without delay in this world endeavor for the ultimate liberation, [the way out];

ded, without delay in this world endeavor for the ultimate liberation, [the way out]; sense-gratification after all is available in all forms of life.

(30) Thus [with all these twenty-four plus one masters] without ties having awakened and with wisdom looking [at the world] from within the soul, I wander the earth free from attachment and false ego. (31) The knowledge acquired from a single teacher cannot be very solid or complete [see 11.3: 21]. The Absolute Truth without a second, is by the sages sung in many ways.'

(32) The Supreme Lord said: 'After the so very intelligent brahmin [who in fact was Lord Dattātreya, see 2.7: 4 and **] thus had spoken to king Yadu and properly was honored by the king offering his obeisances, he thereupon bid farewell and went away, just as contented as he had come. (33) Yadu, the forefather of our forefathers, having heard the words of the avadhūta, became liberated from all his attachment in a consciousness equal toward all.'

*: Considering verse 3.25: 34 stating that devotees seek company to associate with Kṛṣṇa, the ācāryas to this verse say that that single-mindedness with the Lord without speculating as a jñānī, is the same as being alone to prevent quarrels [see pp. 11.9: 10].

** : The paramparā [pp. 11.9: 32] confirms: 'This verse [2.7: 4] mentions that Yadu was purified by contact with the lotus feet of Dattātreya, and similarly the present verse states, vandito sv-arcito rājñā - King Yadu worshiped the lotus feet of the brāhmaṇa. Thus, according to Śrīla Śrīdhara Svāmī, the avadhūta brāhmaṇa is the Personality of Godhead Himself, and this is confirmed by Śrīla Viśvanātha Cakravartī Ṭhākura.'

---

Chapter 5 - The Soul Free, the Soul Bound

---

(1) The Supreme Lord said: 'A soul free from desire who accepts My shelter, should, conscientiously performing the personal duties I spoke about [see also in e.g. 10.60: 52 and B.G. 3: 35], practice the varṇāśrama system of behaving oneself in society [B.G. 4: 13]. (2) A purified soul should understand that all endeavors of embodied souls who, focussed on sense gratification, take the material qualities for true are doomed to fail [see also B.G. 13: 32]. (3) Just as the sensual matters, seen by the meditator in the realm of sleep or in his fantasy, do not help him because of their great variety, also the intelligence is ineffectual when being lead by the senses directed at a diversity of outer appearances [B.G. 2: 41 & 9: 15]. (4) Devoted to Me one gives up one's active [material] life [pravṛtti] and engages in a contemplative life [nivṛtti]; when one is fully absorbed in [self] inquiry one is no longer bound to the injunctions for performing material labor [karma, see 7.15: 47]. (5) Devoted to Me one should at all times respect the vow of yoga [yama, the vidhi] and its regulated practice [niyama] as good as one can, as also respect a guru who knows My form and is peaceful under My control [see also 7.14: 41-42]. (6) Humble without false pride and jealousy, be industrious [in devotion], non-possessive, fixed in friendship, without haste, interested in inquiring and free from spite and idle talk. (7) Remaining neutral with an equal vision towards one's wife, children, home, land, relatives and bank account and such, one should recognize one's self-interest in that of others [see B.G. 5: 18]. (8) The soul is the self-enlightened seer different from the gross and subtle body, just as fire, emitting light as it burns, differs from the firewood [see also B.G. 2: 16-24]. (9) Just like the different qualities of being dormant, manifest, being large or small are there [of the fire], there are also the qualities of the material body the higher self accepts that has entered it [see also 3.24: 6, 4.9: 7, 10.37: 10-11, 10.46: 36]. (10) This body, which was formed by the basic qualities of nature [expanding] from the Original Person, ties the living entity to a material existence [to saṁsāra], from which it breaks away by the knowledge of the Soul. (11) One should therefore, by cultivating knowledge, get in touch with the pure, transcendental [Supreme] Soul situated within oneself [2.2 and B.G. 9: 5] and gradually give up one's minding about the material affair. (12) The ācārya can be compared to the lower part of [a pile of] kindling wood, the disciple to the top part and the instructions to the [kindling] stick used in between, while the knowledge that brings happiness is there like the fire [that brings light, compare 9.14: 44-46]. (13) This purest intelligence of the souls of experience [the ācāryas], drives away the illusion originating from the guṇas. Thereupon that intelligence, which rose because of those modes, finds peace itself, the way a fire burns up when it runs out of fuel [see also 11.3: 12].

(14-16) For the controllers and enjoyers of karma, fruitful labor, there is of course the eternal duality of happiness and grief, time and place, to have and to be. When you take all that is matter for eternal and complete, your intelligence is ruled by all the different forms and changes belonging to it. All living beings thinking thus, oh Uddhava, time and again will find themselves being born [falling ill and dying] and so on [see 3.11]; after all, being united with a form one is bound to the [conditioning] limbs of time [of sun and moon, day and night etc.]. (17) In this, one can clearly see the lack of independence of the karmic controller, as also the happiness and unhappiness of such an enjoyer. What purpose is served by someone [that] helpless [see B.G. 9: 3 and 11.9: 1]? (18) Among the embodied beings the fool is sometimes unhappy and even the sage is neither always happy. Wishing to be happy always is a useless endeavor and in fact something most egotistical [see also B.G. 2: 15 and 11.9: 4]. (19) Even if one manages to achieve happiness and escape distress, one still has no direct knowledge of the [yoga] process by which death loses its power [compare B.G. 10: 34]. (20) What guarantee of material happiness would a material object or lust be able to provide the person? With death never pleasing close at hand such a thing gives no satisfaction, like with a person condemned who is led to his place of execution. (21) What we heard about [heaven] as also what we know from our own experience [on earth], is spoilt by rivalry, fault-finding, lapse and decay. Just like with agriculture where many obstacles are in the way [of a happy result], it is useless to desire for [perfect] material happiness [see also 11.3: 20]. (22) When one manages to perfectly practice one's righteousness [dharma] without being troubled by hindrances, even the status one thus acquires will not last forever. Please, listen therefore to the following [see also B.G. 2: 14].

(23) On earth having worshiped the gods with sacrifices, the performer goes to the heavenly worlds where he may enjoy like a god the celestial pleasures he achieved [see B.G. 3: 11 and 4: 12]. (24) Shining in the temple [the 'vimāna'] because of his accumulated merit he enjoys, being surrounded by goddesses wearing charming clothes, while he [as he leaves this earth] is glorified with songs by the singers of heaven. (25) Surrounded by the sounds of bells he fares to his desire with heavenly women, but while relaxing comfortably in the pleasure gardens of the gods, he in his delight has no awareness of his downfall [see e.g. 7.15: 69-73]. (26) After for long having enjoyed the heavens until his pious credits were used up, having exhausted his merits he against his will falls down from heaven, [not properly fixed] being forced from his course by time [compare B.G. 9: 20-22]. (27-29) When he, due to his material involvement, is engaged in actions against the dharma or, not having conquered his senses, lives wantonly as a miserable, greedy philanderer, is of violence against other living beings, kills animals against the rules and worships hordes of ghosts and spirits [compare 7.12: 12], a living being will, once he passed away, thereupon helplessly land in the deepest darkness of the hellish worlds. He will, because of what he did, again have to accept a material body to perform therewith activities that [again] cause him great grief in the future. What happiness would someone find being sworn to activities that invariably lead to death [see also 5.26: 37 and B.G. 16: 19-21]? (30) In all the worlds among all their leaders there exists fear of Me [in the form of Time]; the individual souls living as long as a kalpa fear Me, and even the one supreme, Brahmā, who lives for two parārdhas, fears Me [see also 1.13: 17-20, 3.8: 20, 3.11: 33, 3.25: 42, 3.26: 16, 3.29: 37, 3.29: 40-45, 5.24: 15, 5.24: 28]. (31) The material senses, stimulated by the qualities of nature, give rise to activities, and the individual soul, the jīva, who is fully engaged by the materially oriented senses and the guṇas, undergoes the various karmic consequences [see also 3.32 and B.G. 3: 27]. (32) As long as there is the differentiation of the modes of nature, there will be the different forms of existence of the soul, and as long as there are these different states of the soul, there will be [karmic] dependence [see also B.G. 17: 2]. (33) As long as one is not free from this dependence there will be fear for the Lord and Controller [who is the Time]. They [then] who enjoy this [karmic bond] will become bewildered and always be full of sorrow. (34) With the given reciprocal action [or the operation] of the basic qualities of nature, one calls Me variously the Time, the Soul, the Vedic Knowledge, the World, [the original nature or] Nature [at large], as also the Dharma.'

(35) Śrī Uddhava said: 'Even though the one embodied is present in the midst of the natural modes, he is not necessarily bound to what incessantly operates upon him from the material body [like happiness and distress]. In other words, how can it happen that someone, as a free soul, is caught in the grip of those basic qualities, oh Almighty One? (36-37) How is he situated, how does he enjoy, or by what symptoms can he be known? What would he eat or how would he evacuate, lie down or sit [compare B.G. 14: 21]? Please explain to me what I ask You, oh Infallible One, oh Best Answerer of Questions. This at the same time being eternally bound and being eternally liberated is something confusing me.'

*: This philosophy is known to be propounded by the followers of Jaimini Kavi who defend the pravṛtti mārga of regulated sense gratification before the nivṛtti-mārga of activities in renunciation; something to which the paramparā offering this book, with this verse, strongly opposes pointing out that one is thus eternally stuck, nitya-baddha, in repeated birth, old age, disease etc.

---

Chapter 6 - Bondage and Liberation Explained and the Devotional Service of the Saintly Person

---

(1) The Supreme Lord said: 'One cannot really say that one is bound or liberated here due to My modes. To be in the grip of the natural qualities or to be free from them is not caused by My illusory energy [*]. (2) There is lamentation, bewilderment, happiness, distress and the acceptance of a material body because of illusion. Material life with its successive states is [merely] an idea of the soul just as unreal as a dream is. (3) Please Uddhava, understand that knowledge and ignorance are two forms of Myself that, as a result of My original potency, give rise to the liberation and bondage of the embodied beings. (4) The bondage of the living entity, which is part and parcel of My Oneness, oh great intelligence, is there since time immemorial because of ignorance, and the opposite [of liberation] is there because of knowledge. (5) Let Me now, My dearest, dilate on the different characteristics of the opposing nature of being conditioned and being liberated, an opposition that is found in one and the same practice. (6) Two birds of a similar nature and friends of each other, one day make a nest in a tree. One of them eats from the fruits of the tree, while the other does not eat, even though he is the strongest of the two [see also 6.4: 24]. (7) The one not eating the fruits of the tree, is conscious and knows both himself and the other one, while the one that eats does not have a clue. The latter is always bound, while the one full of knowledge is eternally liberated [see also B.G. 4: 5]. (8) Although engaged in a body an enlightened person does not abide by the body, like having risen from a dream. A foolish person abides by the body even though he is not the body itself, like seeing a dream [see B.G. 16: 18]. (9) Someone not enlightened is invariably obliged to the false ego, that thinks in accord with the senses directed by the guṇas and the sense objects generated by the modes [see B.G. 3: 28]. (10) The ignorant soul who thus, by fate ordained, was caught here in this body because of his by the guṇas generated karmic activities, thinks: 'I am the doer' [see also B.G. 3: 27]. (11) An intelligent person is not bound that way. Wherever he goes, rests, sits, walks, bathes, sees, touches, smells, eats, hears and so on, he remains detached from the qualities he experiences. (12-13) Though being situated in the material world, he, turned away from its ruling powers and assisted by the most expert and in detachment sharpened vision, cuts with all doubts. Just as the sky, the sun and the wind do not attach themselves, he neither attaches to the variety of matters [the duality of the world], like he has awakened from a dream. (14) The person whose functions of the life breath, senses, mind and intelligence are free from desires, is liberated, despite being situated in a body [ruled] by the natural modes. (15) One's body is sometimes for some reason attacked by animals or destructive people, and sometimes one is worshiped [by a lover or a follower]. An intelligent person is never seriously moved when that happens [see B.G. 14: 22-25]. (16) With an equal vision having moved beyond the notion of good and bad, a wise man will neither praise those who are behaving very well or speaking excellently, nor criticize others who are acting or expressing themselves poorly [see also B.G. 5: 18]. (17) Someone satisfied within should live free from acting, without saying a word and not contemplating good or evil, and that way wander around like being dumb [see also 5.9]. (18) When someone well versed in the Vedic literatures is not absorbed in the Supreme [does not meditate or perform devotional service], the fruit of his effort, his work, will be like that of someone taking care of a cow that gives no milk. (19) Oh Uddhava, he who takes care of a cow that gives no milk, an unchaste wife, a body fully dependent upon others, children without service, wealth wrongly spent, and speaks [about Vedic knowledge] without [ever] mentioning Me [see also 10.14: 4 and 5.6: 11], will suffer one misery after another. (20) A wise person, My dear Uddhava, will not accept words [or texts] devoid of My purifying activities or desired appearances as līlā-avatāras for the sake of the maintenance, creation and annihilation of the world. (21) When one desirous of knowledge thus gives up the misconception of a [material] diversity as existing [separately] from the soul [**], one should put an end to one's materialis-and fix one's purified mind upon Me, the All-pervading One [see also B.G. 7: 19, B.G. 18: 55]. (22) In case you are not able to steady your mind on the spiritual platform, then dedicate, not deviating [from the regulative principles], all your actions to Me without expecting anything in return [B.G. 12: 11, 10: 10, 18: 54]. (23-24) When one with belief listens to, sings about and constantly remembers the narrations about My birth and activities that purify the entire world, and also enacts them dramatically, and thereto, for My sake, under My protection regulates one's religiosity, sensual pleasure and finances [the puruṣārtas], one will develop an unflinching devotion unto Me, the One Eternal, oh Uddhava. (25) By the devotion as acquired in the [sat-saṅga] association with devotees, someone very easily will be able to attain My refuge that those pure souls undoubtedly will show him.'

(26-27) Śrī Uddhava said: 'What kind of person would in Your opinion, oh Uttamaśloka, be a pure soul, and what sort of worship unto You would carry the approval of Your honored faithful followers? Please speak about this to me, Your surrendered devotee who loves You as his only shelter, oh Master of the Universe, Supervisor of the World and Commander of the Person. (28) You, the Supreme Truth and Spirit as [unattached] as the sky, the Original Person transcendental to material nature, are the Supreme Lord who, descending to the desire of Your devotees, has accepted a diversity of forms.'

(29-32) The Supreme Lord said: 'When someone is merciful, causes no harm, is tolerant towards all embodied beings, is firmly anchored in the truth, an irreproachable soul, is equal-minded and helpful towards everyone; when someone is of an intelligence that is not disturbed by material desires, is of restraint, is soft-natured, pure-hearted, non-possessive, not worldly, eats little, is peaceful, steady, has Me for his shelter and is thoughtful; when someone is vigilant, a profound soul, of a firm resolve, has conquered the ṣaṭ-guṇa [the six different forms of material misery], offers respect, inspires, is friendly, compassionate and learned; when someone knows the qualities and shortcomings as taught by Me, and, worshipping Me, is even willing to give up all his religious preferences [see also B.G. 18: 66], he belongs to the best of the truthful souls [see also 5.18: 12, B.G. 12: 13-20]. (33) Whether someone knows or does not know what I am, who I am or how I exist, when he is exclusively devoted to Me, I count him among the best devotees. (34-41) Seeing, touching and worshipping My appearance in this world, My devotees render personal service and offer prayers of glorification and obeisance, to which they regularly sing about My qualities and activities. Hearing the topics about Me they always with faith meditate upon Me, oh Uddhava, and offer as servants in full surrender all that they acquire. Discussing My birth and activities they take great delight in engaging with musical instruments and songs and dance, with discussions and festivals in My sacred houses. Sacrificing at all celebrations and annual festivities as mentioned in the Vedic literatures and their tantras, they observe vows and are of initiation in relation to Me. With faithfully installing My deity they endeavor, for themselves as also for others, by working for flower gardens, orchards, playgrounds, cities and temples. Sin-re as servants they serve Me by thoroughly cleaning and dusting the house [the temple], washing it with water [and cow-dung, see also 10.6: 20*], sprinkling it with scented water and making mandalas. Modestly without pride, not advertising their devotional service, they not even use for themselves the light of the lamps presented to Me and offer Me articles most dear to them or most desirable in the material world. With that kind of offering one qualifies for immortality.

(42) The sun, the fire, the brahmins, the cows, the Vaiṣnavas, the sky, the wind, the water, the earth, the self and all living beings, My dearest, constitute the places of My worship. (43-45) In the sun one can find Me by offering selected verses from the three Vedas [see also the Gāyatrī and the Sūrya-namaskār]. In fire one finds Me with oblations of ghee. One can find Me as the best among the scholars when one worships Me by offering them hospitality. With the cows, My dear, you reach Me by means of offerings of grass and such. One finds Me in the Vaiṣnavas by honoring them with loving friendship. I am found in the sky [of one's inner space] when one is fixed in meditation in the heart. In the air one finds Me by considering it the most important [life giving principle of prāṇa, by means of prāṇāyāma see B.G. 4: 29]. In water one can find Me by using articles of worship together with water [see B.G. 9: 26]. In the earth [one finds Me] with confidential mantras and within the self one can find Me by offering food to the embodied soul [see e.g. Prasāda sevāya and Bhoga āratī]. One may worship Me as the knower of the field in all living beings [see Paramātmā and B.G. 13: 3] by seeing Me as equally present everywhere [see niyama]. (46) Peacefully being absorbed in Me thus meditating these different places, one should be of worship for My transcendental form that is equipped with the conch shell, the disc, the club and the lotus flower. (47) Someone who with his mind fixed on Me thus worships Me with sacrificial performances and pious works [as mentioned], obtains loving service unto Me and has My remembrance [of realized knowledge] because of his fine service [see also B.G. 5: 29].

(48) Oh Uddhava, apart from the bhakti-yoga realized through association with My devotees, there are no means that actually work, for I am the path of life, the refuge, for the souls of virtue [see also 4.31: 12]. (49) And now, oh child of the Yadus, I will speak to you, who are willing to listen, even about the most confidential supreme secret [of intimate association with Me], for you are My servant, well-wisher and friend [compare B.G. 18: 63 & 68].’

*: The paramparā adds: 'The Supreme Personality of Godhead is not different from His potencies, yet He is always above them as the supreme controller.... Liberation means that the living entity should transfer himself to the spiritual potency of the Lord, which can be divided into three categories - hlādinī, the potency of bliss; sandhinī, the potency of eternal existence; and saṁvit, the potency of omniscience.' This is another formulation of the divine in terms of sat-cit-ānanda; Kṛṣṇa as being eternity, consciousness and bliss.

Uddhava Gītā

** : Quoting from the Viveka, Śrīla Madhvācārya states that nānātva-bhramam, the mistake one makes with the material diversity, indicates the following illusions: considering the living entity to be the Supreme; considering all living entities to be ultimately one entity without separate individuality; considering that there are many Gods [independent of one another, see 5.18: 12]; thinking that Kṛṣṇa is not God [is not both personal and impersonal, the complete whole, vāsudevaḥ sarvam iti, B.G. 7: 19]; and considering that the material universe [the impersonal nature] is the ultimate reality [see also 1.2: 11]. All these illusions are together fought by chanting, meditating, the Mahāmantra, or attending to the other bhajans, for two hours a day.

---

Chapter 7 - The Confidential Secret Beyond Renunciation and Knowledge

---

(1-2) The Supreme Lord said: 'One does not ascend to Me by mysticism or analysis, common piety or the study of the scriptures, by penances, renunciation, pious works or charity, by respecting vows, ceremonies, Vedic hymns, pilgrimage, by general discipline or the basic rules. One rather closes Me in one's heart by the sat-saṅga with My devotees [see 11.11: 25] that drives away all attachment to sense gratification. (3-6) By associating with My devotees many living beings in every age achieved My refuge, like the sons of Diti, the malicious ones, the animals, the birds, the singers and dancers of heaven, the souls of excellence and of perfection, the venerable souls and the treasure keepers, the scientific ones among the humans and the merchants, laborers and women, the uncivilized ones and those of passion and slowness. So also did Vṛtrāsura, the son of Kayādhu [Prahāda, see 6.18: 12-13] and others like them, Vṛṣaparvā [see 9.18: 26], Bali, Bāṇa, Maya as also Vibhīṣaṇa [brother of Rāvaṇa], Sugrīva [leader of the Vānaras] and Hanumān, Jāmbavān, Gajendra, Jaṭāyu, Tulādhāra, Dharma-vyādha, Kubjā and the gopīs in Vraja, the wives of the brahmins [see 10.23] and others. (7) Not having studied the sacred scriptures, nor having worshiped the great saints, they all, without vows and not having undergone austerities, attained Me by association with My devotees. (8-9) Only by unalloyed love indeed, the gopīs, just as others of a limited intelligence like the cows, the immobile creatures, the snakes [like Kāliya] and more animals, managed to achieve perfection and quite easily attained Me, I who cannot even be reached by greatly endeavoring in yoga, analysis, charity, vows, penances, ritualistic sacrifices, exegesis, personal study or taking to the renounced order. (10) When Akrūra took Me and Balarāma to Mathurā, they, [the inhabitants of Vṛṇḍāvana] whose hearts were attached [to Me] with the deepest love, suffered greatly because of the separation, for they saw no one else to make them happy [see 10: 39]. (11) All the nights they in Vṛṇḍāvana spent with Me, their most dearly Beloved, oh Uddhava, seemed to take but a moment to them, but again bereft of Me they became as long as a kalpa. (12) Just as sages fully absorbed lose the awareness of names and forms - like they are rivers entering the water of the ocean - also they, whose consciousness was intimately bound to Me, had no awareness anymore of their bodies, their present or their future [see also B.G. 2: 70]. (13) The hundreds and thousands [of women] who desired Me as their friend and lover, had no knowledge of My actual position and attained Me by associating with Me, the Absolute Supreme Truth. (14-15) Therefore, oh Uddhava, give up the [religious] precepts and prohibitions, denial and routines, and that what you should listen to and have listened to. Choose for Me alone, the actual shelter of the Soul within all embodied beings. With that exclusive devotion you will enjoy My mercy and have nothing to fear from any side [compare B.G. 18: 66].'

(16) Śrī Uddhava said: 'Hearing Your words, oh master of all yoga masters, has not dispelled the doubt in my heart that is clouding my mind.'

(17) The Supreme Lord said: 'He, the living being in person [the Lord], is manifest within along with the prāṇa. He after all entered the heart and has His place in the subtle sound vibration that fills the mind with the grosser form of the [sounds of words, that are] different intonations of short and long vowels and consonants. (18) Just as fire confined within wood, with the help of air, kindled by friction is born very tiny and increases with ghee, I similarly manifest Myself in this [Vedic, inner] voice. (19) Speech, the function of the hands and legs, the genitals and the anus [the karmendriyas], smell, taste, sight, touch and hearing [the jñānendriyas], and the functions of one's determination, wisdom and self concern [or 'mind, intelligence and false ego'], as also the primary cause of matter [pradhāna or the 'thread', see 11.9: 19] and [the guṇas] rajas, tamas and sattva, are thus [to be understood as] transformations [of My nature]. (20) This living entity, one and unmanifest, which is concerned with the threefold [nature of the guṇas], constitutes the source of the lotus of creation. He who is eternal, in the course of time divided [therewith] His potencies in many divisions, just like seeds do that fell on fertile soil. (21) The complete of this universe, expanding long and wide like cloth expanding along the threads of its warp and woof, is situated in Him [on His thread, see also 6.3: 12 and B.G. 7: 7]. Since time immemorial there is this tree of material existence [saṁsāra] that, blossoming and producing fruits, is naturally inclined to fruitive action [or karma]. (22-23) Of this tree extending in the sun there are two seeds [sin and piety], hundreds of roots [the living entities], three lower trunks [the modes], five upper trunks [the elements], five saps produced [sound, form, touch, taste and aroma], eleven branches [the mind and the ten indriyas], two birds having a nest [jīva and ātmā], three types of bark [air, bile and mucus] and two fruits [happiness and distress]. Those who fervently desiring live a household life [the 'vultures'], enjoy one fruit of the tree [that of sin], whereas the other fruit [of piety] is enjoyed by the swanlike [sages] who live in the forest. He who, with the help of the worshipable souls, [the devotees, the gurus] knows the Oneness of Him who, by dint of His māyā, appears in many forms, knows the [actual meaning of the] Vedas. (24) The sober soul who, thus with unalloyed devotion, honors the spiritual master and with the axe of knowledge cuts with the subtle body of attachment entertained by the individual soul, attains with the greatest care [living spiritually] the Supreme Soul, and then abandons the means [by which he attained, see also B.G. 15: 3-4].

---

Chapter 8 - The Haṁsa-avatāra Answers the Questions of the Sons of Brahmā

---

(1) The Supreme Lord said: 'The goodness, passion and ignorance we know from the guṇas are matters of the mind and not of the soul; with goodness the other two can be counteracted while goodness itself is controlled by character and good sense [*]. (2) The goodness of someone leads to - and strengthens - the dharma that is characterized by devotional service unto Me. That what belongs to the mode of goodness [like nature, consciousness, courage and wisdom] will result in [bhāgavata-]dharma when one seriously cultivates [its] inner strength. (3) When goodness increases and dominates, dharma puts an end to passion and ignorance. When they are superseded the godlessness [adharmā] that is the root of the two is quickly vanquished. (4) The doctrine [followed], [the way one deals with] water, the people [one associates with], one's surroundings and

[the way one behaves with] time, one's [occupational] activities, one's birth [or social background], as also [the type of] meditation, mantras and purificatory rites [one respects], are the ten [factors] determining the [prominence of a particular] mode. (5) That what of these matters belongs to the mode of goodness is appreciated by the classical sages, that what belongs to the mode of ignorance is criticized by them, and that what belongs to the mode of passion they are neutral about. (6) As long as there is no self-realization [self-remembrance] making amends [for the influence of the basic qualities], a person should cultivate the things belonging to the mode of goodness, so that the character develops from which the religiousness rises that leads to spiritual insight. (7) Just as fire, which in a forest of bamboos was generated by friction of the stalks, pacifies after having burned [see also 1.10: 2, 3.1: 21], also the activity of the material body [and the mind] will pacify that was generated by the interaction of the natural modes.'

(8) Śrī Uddhava said: 'Mortals generally are very well known with the fact that sense gratification is a source of trouble, but they nevertheless delight in it, oh Kṛṣṇa. How can it be that they willingly behave like dogs, asses and goats?'

(9-10) The Supreme Lord said: 'It is because a fool has another intelligence in his I-awareness. Not paying attention [to his dharma] a terrible passion arises in his heart that leads his mind astray. Bound to that passion the mind thus convinced imagines all kinds of things. Focussed on the qualities of nature [the guṇas] he is thus beset with desires that make his life unbearable. (11) With the senses not under control someone, bewildered by the force of passion and under the sway of desires, engages in fruitful activities, despite being well aware of the resulting unhappiness. (12) Even though [also] the intelligence of a learned person gets bewildered by passion and ignorance, no attachment arises in him because he, well aware of the contamination, carefully puts his mind back on the right track. (13) When one has conquered the breathing process [prāṇāyāma] and has mastered the sitting postures [āsana], one should attentively, step by step, without slackening gather one's mind by concentrating on Me at appointed times [to the positions of the sun and the moon, see B.G. 7: 8 and 5: 26-28]. (14) The yoga system as instructed by My pupils under the lead of Sanaka [the Kumāras] boils down to the following: turn the mind away from everything and directly find absorption in Me the way it should [with mantras, see also 8.3: 22-24].'

(15) Śrī Uddhava said: 'When and in what form, dear Keśava, have You instructed Sanaka and the others in this yoga? That is what I would like to know.'

(16) The Supreme Lord said: 'The sons headed by Sanaka who took their birth from the mind of him who originated from the golden egg [Hiraṇyagarbha or Brahmā], inquired of their father about the so very subtle, supreme goal of the science of yoga. (17) Sanaka and the others said to him: 'The mind is directed at the guṇas, the qualities of nature, and the guṇas impose themselves on the mind. Oh Master, what is for someone who desires liberation, for someone who wishes to cross over this material ocean, the process of breaking away from that mutual effect [see also B.G. 2: 62-63]?'

(18) The Supreme Lord said: 'The great self-born godhead, the creator of all beings, thus being questioned, seriously pondered over what was asked but could not find the words to describe the essential truth, for his mind was bewildered because of his creative labor [see also 2.6: 34, 2.9: 32-37 and 10: 13]. (19) With the desire to find closure he remembered Me, the original godhead [he originated from, see 3.8], and at that time I became visible in My Hamsa form [the Swan **]. (20) Seeing Me they, headed by Brahmā, approached Me, offered their obeisances at My lotus feet and asked: 'Who are You?' (21) Thus being questioned by the sages interested in the ultimate truth, I spoke to them. Please Uddhava, hear now what I thereupon said to them. (22) 'Oh brahmins, if you with that question mean to say that, relating to the one true essence, there would be no difference between our individual souls, how then would you be able to pose a question like this, oh sages, or how could I as a speaker then be of any authority [or constitute a refuge]? (23) Also if you would refer to the five elements our bodies are equally composed of, your question about who I am would in fact be a meaningless gesture of words. (24) That what by the mind, speech, sight and the other senses is grasped, is what I all am. There is really nothing that exists outside of Me, that is what you have to understand clearly. (25) The mind is directed at the guṇas and the guṇas impose themselves on the mind, dear men, but to the living entity of which I am the Soul, both the mind and the guṇas are outer appearances. (26) With the mind directed at the natural qualities and the qualities that, imposing themselves by stimulating the senses, constantly put the mind at work, the one who is of [realization with] My transcendental [Hamsa] form, [by means of meditation] has to give up both the mind and the [operation of the] guṇas [see also vṛtti and neti neti]. (27) Wakefulness, dreaming and deep sleep are the transformations of the mind due to the basic qualities of nature. The individual soul is, with characteristics different from them, known to be their witness [see also 7.7: 25 and B.G. 7: 5]. (28) The materially motivated intelligence constitutes the bondage that keeps the soul occupied with the modes of nature, but when one is situated in Me, in the fourth state of consciousness [turīya], one at that moment can give up both the mind and the sense objects [see 11.3: 35]. (29) The bondage of the soul as a result of identifying oneself with the body [of false ego,] constitutes the opposite purpose. A soul of knowledge who detached in samsāra is situated in the fourth state, gives up the anxiety [about those ego-matters]. (30) As long as a person is convinced of many different purposes and does not desist [from that engagement] by means of meditation, he, even though awake, will be sleeping with his eyes open, just as unaware as someone who sees something in a dream [see also B.G. 2: 41]. (31) The states of existence apart from the Supreme Soul are inessential because of the separation created by them; to the seer who is filled with motives and objectives they are just as deluding as what one experiences in a dream. (32) In the waking state he enjoys the qualities of the external matters at the moment. In his dreams he undergoes with all his senses a similar experience in the mind. In deep sleep he withdraws himself completely. But being one in his remembrance [in turiya] he, as a witness of the functioning of the three successive states of consciousness, becomes lord and master over his senses [see also 4.29: 60-79 and B.G. 15: 7-8]. (33) After considering the three states of consciousness that originate from the modes of My nature, My deluding potency, then be resolute about the purpose [of realizing Me as the fourth state] and cut in your heart with the cause of all doubts [the ahaṅkāra] by means of the sword of discrimination sharpened by the logic and instructions concerning the truth. (34) Regard this delusional state of mind, [with images] popping up today and gone tomorrow, as the most restless sphere of a firebrand. The one spiritual soul deceptively appears in many divisions as an illusion, a threefold dream of variations operated by the guṇa creation [see also B.G. 9: 15, 15: 16, liṅga and sidhānta]. (35) When you turn your eye away from that [creation] and become silent with your desires ended, you [in meditation] must arrive at the realization of your [actual] happiness. And in case you happen to be [full of thoughts] about this earth, you have to understand that that is insubstantial. That what you give up you will remember till the end of your life and will not confuse you again. (36) Just as someone blurred by liquor is indifferent about the clothes he put on, it makes no difference to the one of perfection whether his perishable body sits or stands, or whether he by providence leaves this earth or obtains [a new body], for he reached his original position [of service, his svarūpa]. (37) The body will as long as its karma, its chain of fruitive actions, lasts, continue with the breathing it took up as ordained by fate. But having awakened to his original position someone highly situated in the absorption of yoga will no longer cultivate any such [ego driven] dreaming or manifest as such. (38) Oh learned souls, understand that with this explanation about the confidential, analytical knowledge of yoga, the science of uniting one's consciousness, I have come to you as Yajña [Viṣṇu, the Lord of Sacrifice] with the desire to describe the dharma of persons like you. (39) Oh best of the twice-born souls, I am the Supreme Way of yoga, of analysis, of the truth and the sacred law, as also the [ultimate] path of [all] beauty, fame and self-control. (40) For being free from the natural modes, all the excellence, such as being transcendently situated, being free from expectations, being the Well-wisher, the Dearest One, the True Self, the One Equal, the detachment and so on, belongs to My honor.'

(41) [Kṛṣṇa said to Uddhava:] I thus put an end to the doubts of the sages headed by Sanaka. Honoring Me with transcendental devotion, they with beautiful hymns chanted My glories. (42) Perfectly worshiped and glorified by the greatest among the sages I thereupon, before the eyes of Brahmā, returned to My abode.'

*: In Sanskrit the term sattva, is, apart from meaning goodness, inner strength, good sense and true nature, another word for character. Character, moral backbone, is also described as śīla or svarūpa; 'form, piety, morality, habit or custom' or 'one's own form, one's true nature' or one's constitutional position of relating to Kṛṣṇa as Swami Prabhupāda preferred to speak of.

Uddhava Gītā

***: The paramparā comment here says: "Hamsa means 'swan', and the specific ability of the swan is to separate a mixture of milk and water, extracting the rich, milky portion. Similarly, Lord Kṛṣṇa appeared as Hamsa, or the swan, in order to separate the pure consciousness of Lord Brahmā from the modes of material nature."*

---

Chapter 9 - The Devotional Coherence of the Methods and the Meditation on Viṣṇu

---

(1) Śrī Uddhava said: 'Kṛṣṇa, the defenders of the Absolute Truth speak of many processes for spiritual advancement, are they supreme in their combination or would one of them be the most important? (2) You stated clearly, oh Master, that the yoga of devotion by which the mind becomes fixed on You, practiced free from desires, removes all material attachment.'

(3) The Supreme Lord said: 'This message known as the Vedas that concerns the dharma that is founded on Me, was lost at the time of the universal annihilation [pralaya], but was by Me at the beginning [of a new era] spoken to Brahmā [see also 3.9: 29-43]. (4) Brahmā spoke this to his eldest son Manu, and the seven great sages headed by Bhṛgu in their turn accepted it from Manu [see 8.1 & 8.13 and B.G. 4: 1-3]. (5-7) From these forefathers, there were the following descendants: the godly and the demoniac souls, the Śiva followers, the human beings, the perfected souls and the singers of heaven, the scientists and the venerable souls. From [different combinations of] rajas, tamas and sattva [the guṇas] the many different natures generated of the different humanoids [Kimdevas], the half-humans [Kinnaras], the snake-like types [Nāgas], the wild men [Rākṣasas] and the ape-like souls [Kimpuruṣas]. From all these living entities, who by their propensities are divided in many types and just as many leaders, the diversity of rituals and mantras flowed [like rivers from a mountain]. (8) Due to this great variety of natures the philosophies of life are thus divided among the human beings. Some of those philosophies in this constitute traditions of disciplic succession while others are heretical [pāṣaṇḍa]. (9) The people whose intelligence is bewildered by My illusory power, oh best of all persons, express themselves in countless ways about what according to their karma and taste would be better. (10) Some people speak in favor of pious activities while others speak of fame, sense gratification, truthfulness, self-control and peacefulness. Some propound self-interest, political influence, renunciation or consumption and others defend sacrifice, penance, charity, vows and arrangements of do's and don'ts [yama-niyama]. (11) With inevitably a beginning and an end to the meager ends gained with one's karma, there is the prospect of misery as a consequence; situated in ignorance one is doomed to a miserable existence full of complaints. (12) Someone who has fixed his consciousness on Me, oh man of learning, and in every respect is free from material desires, knows the happiness of My spiritual Self. How can such a happiness ever be attained by those who are attached to worldly affairs [see 4.31: 12]? (13) He who does not desire, who is of peace and controls his senses, whose consciousness is equal whatever the circumstances and who has a mind that is completely satisfied with Me, is filled with happiness wherever he goes. (14) A soul fixed on Me, wants Me and nothing else. He does not desire the position of Brahmā, nor the position of Indra. He neither wants an empire on earth nor a sovereign position in the lower worlds, he does not desire the perfections [the siddhis] of yoga or a second birth [see e.g. 5.1: 6]. (15) Neither the one born from My body [Brahmā], nor Śankara [Śiva], Saṅkarṣaṇa [Balarāma], the Goddess of Fortune [Śrī] or even My own Self, is as dear to Me as you [see also B.G 12: 20]. (16) The sage [the devotee] who without personal desire is of peace, who is not inimical to anyone and of an equal vision, I always follow closely so that there is purification with the dust of the lotus feet [see also 7.14: 17]. (17) The great souls who, not eager for sense gratification, are of a mind that is constantly attached to Me, who are of inner peace, who care for all individual souls and whose consciousness is not ruled by lusts, experience My happiness that can only be known in complete independence [in detachment]. (18) Despite being harassed by sensual desires, a devotee of Mine who did not conquer his often strong senses, by dint of his devotion will not be defeated by them [see also 1.5: 17, 8.7: 44, 11.13: 12 and B.G. 9: 30, 2: 62-64]. (19) Just as firewood because of the blazing flames of a fire turns into ashes, devotion with Me as the object burns the [consequences of one's] sins completely, oh Uddhava. (20) The yoga system, analytical philosophy, pious activities, Vedic study, austerity and renunciation, oh Uddhava, do not keep Me as satisfied as a well developed devotional service unto Me. (21) One obtains Me by single-minded devotion with faith in the Supreme Soul, the object of love of the devotees. Devotional service directed at Me will even purify someone who has eaten dogs. (22) Neither dharma accompanied by truthfulness and mercy, nor knowledge linked to austerity, will purify one's consciousness fully when bereft of devotional service unto Me. (23) How can without bhakti one's hair stand on end, without loving service the heart melt, without devotion the tears flow, the bliss be and one's heart be purified? (24) The universe is purified by the one whose voice chokes up, whose heart melts, who cries again and again, sometimes laughs, is ashamed, loudly sings and dances in the connectedness of My bhakti [see also Śrī Śrī Śikṣāṣṭaka and 11.2: 40]. (25) Just like gold being molten in fire gives up impurities and returns to its original state, also the contamination of karma is removed from the spirit soul when one worships Me united in My loving service. (26) Even as the power to see restores once the eye is treated with ointment, the spirit soul again sees the One Subtle Essence once being cleansed by hearing and chanting My pious narrations. (27) Just as the intelligence of someone meditating the objects of the senses is entangled in the sense experience [see B.G. 2: 62-63], one's thought becomes dissolved in Me when one keeps thinking of Me. (28) One's material considerations are therefore like the figments of a dream; [having awakened being] absorbed in Me one forsakes them. The mind is purified when one is completely absorbed in My love. (29) Giving up being associated [intimately] with women and keeping away from those who chase women, one should [thus free from being physically identified] composed sit at ease in seclusion and with great care concentrate on Me [see also 11.8: 13-14 *]. (30) No other attachment brings a man as much suffering and bondage as the attachment to women and the association with those who are attached to women [see also 1.4: 25, 5.5: 2, 5.13: 16, 6.9: 9, 7.12: 9, 9.14: 36, 9.19: 17, 10.10: 8, 10.51: 51, 10.60: 44-45 & 48].'

(31) Śrī Uddhava said: 'Oh Lotus-eyed One, how should one meditate on You when one desires liberation, in what way and on what form? Please, can You speak to me about meditation?'

(32-33) The Supreme Lord said: 'Sitting straight and comfortably on a seat at the level of the floor, one should place one's hands in one's lap and focus one's eyes on the tip of one's nose. Then one should clear the path of one's prāṇa, one's vital air, step by step exercising inhaling, retaining and exhaling and the other way around - while controlling one's senses [**, see prāṇāyāma, and B.G. 4: 29]. (34) With the help of one's life breath [prāṇa] one should, like through the fibre of a lotus stalk, guide the sound AUM upwards to the heart to vibrate it there continuously like a ringing bell so as to reunite the [15 after] sounds of recitation [in the nose, anusvāra ***]. (35) The life breath thus joined with the Praṇava [see also 9.14: 46] must be practiced ten times, at sunrise, noon and sunset. After one month one will then be in control of one's vital air [*4]. (36-42)

With one's eyes half closed one should, alert and with one's face lifted, concentrate on the lotus within the heart that is directed upwards. Within the whorl of its eight petals one should one after the other picture the sun, the moon and the fire. Within the fire one should consider My harmonious form, so auspicious for meditation, that is gentle, cheerful and endowed with four beautiful arms. The neck and the forehead are of a charming beauty as also the pure smile and the ears with the glowing shark shaped earrings. One should meditate on the golden dress, the complexion with the color of a rain cloud, the curl on the chest where the goddess resides, the conch and the disc, the club and the lotus, as also on the beauty of the forest flower garland. One should also meditate on all the beautiful and charming parts of My body: the feet with their shining bells, the richly glowing Kaustubha gem, the shining crown and bracelets, the girdle and armlets, the merciful smile and the delicate glance. By turning the mind away from the senses and their sense objects, one thus with intelligence should lead the charioteer of one's thinking [the soul, the master of intelligence], sober and grave, [with love] in the direction of My completeness. (43) One's consciousness spread over all of this then must be withdrawn to one point by focussing on the wonderful smile of the face, and by no longer regarding other parts. (44) Thus being established, one should withdraw one's consciousness by meditating on the ether. Also forsaking that, one next must ascend to Me and not think of anything else anymore. (45) With one's consciousness thus fully absorbed, the individual soul sees Me in the self and all selves in Me, the same way the rays of the sun are united in the sun [see also B.G. 9: 29]. (46) The deluded state of considering oneself the owner, the knower and the doer, will all together soon find its dissolution in the mind of the yogi who, most concentrated, practices the meditation as mentioned [compare 2.2: 8-14].'

*: Not to have this verse misinterpreted with the Sanskrit word saṅgam that one would have to shun association with women in stead of shunning the attachment of being together with them, was by Svāmī Prabhupāda stressed - contrary to the tradition in India - that women and men can very well associate both living within one temple or household within the culture of Kṛṣṇa consciousness. This was one of his great feats of reform to the lead of a traditional temple tradition that was negative about living together with women. Nor must from this verse be concluded that one should not be intimate with women, for procreation would stop then and the human race would end. It is all about not getting attached that way by proper regulation of kāma as a basic civil virtue or puruṣārtha. One should, preferably being married, always be prepared - at times - to give up the intimacy with each other and embrace celibacy, the same way as one should always be prepared - at times - to engage in intimacy and embrace each other in Kṛṣṇa's love for and from women.

** : The reversal technique of prāṇāyāma as described here practically could mean that one pauses halfway inhaling and exhaling, that is to say, one half way begins to inhale and then half way back does the opposite exhaling. One normally inhales, pauses and exhales following the natural flow of breath, but in this case one focusses half way this continuous flow of breath for the sake of a balance between one's inhaling and exhaling.

Uddhava Gītā

***: Anusvāra refers to a nasal vibration pronounced after the fifteen Sanskrit vowels. When one is culturally not of a regular mantra practice of reciting Sanskrit and thus does not have any anusvāra, nasal vibration to integrate, it is the advise for this Age of Quarrel to practice the Mahāmantra to appease the mind so wayward with modern time: hare Kṛṣṇa, hare Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa Kṛṣṇa, hare hare, hare Rāma, hare Rāma, Rāma Rāma, hare hare.

*4: Considering the greatly variable length of day worldwide it is customary to do this at the fixed times of the regular hours of a [meditation] clock preferably set to the sun at twelve when the sun goes through the south [see also cakra].

---

Chapter 10 - Mystical Perfection: the Siddhis

---

(1) The Supreme Lord said: 'When a yogi is connected [in the Absolute Truth], has conquered his senses and breathing, and has fixed his attention on Me, the mystical perfections of yoga are at his disposal.'

(2) Uddhava said: 'Oh You who bring all yogis perfection, kindly tell me which method is required for concentration and how these perfections work. And, Acyuta, how many perfections are there?'

(3) The Supreme Lord said: 'The masters of yoga speak of eighteen mystical perfections [siddhis] and meditations [leading to them]. Eight of them are [primary and] prominent in Me and ten of them [are secondary and] originate from the quality [of goodness]. (4-5) Oh gentle one, the eight mystical perfections consist of the ability to become, as for the form, the smallest [aṇimā], the biggest [mahimā] or the lightest [laghimā relative to garimā, the heaviest], the ability to acquire whatever material object [prāpti], the ability to enjoy sensually whatever can be seen or heard [prākāmya], the ability to have the upper hand in employing the forces [īśitā or īśitvā], the ability to be in control by means of magic unobstructed by the modes [vaśitā], and the ability to answer to any desire that seeks [His] favor [kāmāvasāyitā]. Know them to be the ones prominent in Me. (6-7) [The ten secondary siddhis consist of] the ability in this body not to be plagued by hunger and thirst and such, the ability to hear from afar, the ability to see things far away, the ability to be transported with the speed of mind, the ability to assume any form at will, the ability to enter into the bodies of others, the ability to die at will, the ability to witness the sporting [of the heavenly girls] with the gods, the ability to be of perfect accomplishment as one likes, and the ability to have one's commands fulfilled unimpeded. (8-9) To know the past, the present and the future, to be free from the dualities, to know the minds of others, to check the potency of fire, the sun, water, poison and so on, and not to be conquered by others, are examples of the perfections that are described as being the result of concentrating in yoga. Please learn now from Me by means of which type of meditation what perfection occurs.

(10) My worshiper who focusses his mind, pertaining to the subtle elements of perception [tanmātra], on Me as the Self of those sense elements and nothing else, obtains the aṇimā perfection [the ability to enter the smallest]. (11) Focussing one's mind on the truth of the complete [the mahat-tattva] with Me as the inhabiting soul, one achieves the perfection of mahimā [to enter the greatest] as also grip on each element separately. (12) The yogi may obtain laghimā [lightness] by attaching to Me as the supreme element of the smallest elements [the atoms], the subtle property of Time [see also cakra]. (13) He who with his mind focussed on Me narrows down the mind completely to the emotionality of the I-principle, obtains the siddhi of prāpti [mystic acquisition] by which he becomes the proprietor of the senses of all living beings. (14) In order to obtain from Me, whose appearance lies beyond perception, the super excellent siddhi of prākāmya [to enjoy whatever whenever], one should fix one's mental activity on Me, the Supersoul that is the thread running through the huge reality of matter [see also sūtra]. (15) When one focusses one's consciousness on Viṣṇu, the Original Controller of the Three [guṇas, see also B.G. 7: 13] who is the mover in the form of Time, one will obtain the siddhi of īśitvā [the supremacy] by means of which the conditioned body [the field] and its knower can be controlled [*]. (16) The yogi who fixes his mind on Me, Nārāyaṇa, the fourth state [turīya] that is described by the word fortunate [bhagavat **], obtains, being endowed with My nature, the vaśitā perfection [the ability to subdue by means of magic]. (17) When one focusses one's mind, which is pure in Me, on the impersonal absolute [brahman] that is free from material qualities [or transcendental], one obtains the supreme of happiness wherein one's desire finds its complete fulfillment [kāmā-vasāyitā].

(18) When a human being concentrates on Me as the Lord of Śvetadvīpa, the personification of goodness, the sum total of dharma, he obtains a pure existence free from the six waves [of material disturbance: hunger, thirst, bewilderment, decay, grief and death, anūrmi-mattvam, see also ṣaṭ-ūrmi]. (19) When one in the mind leads home the transcendental sound that is present in the prāṇa [see 11.14: 35], in Me, the personification of the sky, one perceives therein the Swan [Lord Hamsa or the saintly person, see 11.13: 19] and hears the words spoken by all living beings [dūra-śravaṇa, see also divyam śrotam]. (20) When one merges one's eyes with the sun and the sun with one's eyes [doing so transcendently and not staring physically into the sun] one can, with one's mind in meditation on Me, therein see anything that is far away [dūra-darśana, see also 2.1: 30]. (21) By virtue of fully uniting in Me one's mind, one's body, and one's breath following the mind, one's self goes wherever the mind goes [manojava]. (22) Because it lies within the power of My yoga [to appear in different forms], for the mind intent on assuming whatever form, when I am the shelter, the very form will appear that was desired [kāmarūpa]. (23) When a perfected yogi [a siddha] wishes to enter the body of another person, he must give up his own gross body and project himself into that body. That he should accomplish by, like being the wind, entering it through the vital breath, the way a bee switches flowers [para-kāya-praveśanam]. (24) When [a yogi is about to die and] wants to give up the material body, he blocks his anus with his heel and carries his prāṇa from the heart up to the chest, and from there to the throat to go to the head, from where he, rising to the spiritual seat at the top of the skull [the brahma-randhreṇa], leads himself to the spiritual world [svacchandu-mṛtyu, see also 2.2: 19-21]. (25) When one desires to enjoy the pleasure gardens of the demigods, one should meditate on the mode of goodness situated in Me, so that one sees the by goodness moved women of the demigods arrive in their vehicles [their vimānas, devānām saha-kṛīḍānudarśanam]. (26) When someone by means of his reason became convinced of My truth, or else by his devotion unto Me, he with his mind thus absorbed, consequently will achieve his purpose [yathā-saṅkalpa-samsiddhi]. (27) The person who arrived at the realization of My nature, supremacy and dominion, is someone who by no means can be frustrated, for his order and command are as good as Mine [ājñāpratihatā gatih, see also B.G. 9: 31].

(28) A yogi, pure of character, who by dint of his devotion unto Me knows how to focus his mind [dhāranā], acquires insight in the three phases of time [past, present and future] including knowledge of birth and death [see trikālika]. (29) Of a sage versed in uniting consciousness whose mind was pacified in My yoga, the body cannot be injured by fire and so on, just as aquatics cannot be harmed by water [see also 7.5: 33-50]. (30) He [my devotee] becomes unconquerable when he meditates on My expansions that are decorated with the Śrīvatsa and the weapons, flags, ceremonial umbrellas and different fans [see also B.G. 11: 32].

(31) The man of wisdom who worships Me thus by the process of concentrating in yoga, will in every respect be attended by the mystical perfections as described. (32) What perfection would be difficult to achieve for a sage who, being focussed by meditation on Me, subjugated his senses, his breathing and his mind? (33) One says [though] that they [these siddhis], for the one who practices the highest form of yoga - the [bhakti-]yoga by means of which one obtains everything thinkable from Me - are a hindrance and a waste of time. (34) All perfections one in this world may acquire by birth, by herbs, austerities and by mantras, are all obtained by the practice of [bhakti-]yoga. Progress in uniting one's consciousness cannot be achieved by any other method [***]. (35) I am the cause and the protector of all the perfections. I am the Lord of Yoga [the final union], the Lord of analysis, of dharma and of the [Vedic] teachers, propounders and adherents. (36) The same way material elements have their existence inside and outside the living beings, I Myself, the Soul, who cannot be enclosed, exist both inside and outside of all the embodied beings [see also B.G. 2: 29-30].'

*: Verse 15 refers to attainment of spiritual perfection by meditation on the personal, transcendental aspect of time of Viṣṇu, as opposed to meditating time as mentioned in verse 12, relating more to the impersonal aspect of the natural order belonging to the elements, of the cakra that is Viṣṇu's weapon.

** : Apart from the three guṇas to Lord Nārāyaṇa and the three states of consciousness of waking, dreaming and dreamless sleep, there is also mention of the three planes of existence of the physical gross of the greater universe consisting of the five elements; the astral, subtle, plane of the ten senses of action and perception and their objects, the mind and intelligence, and the causal plane of the consciousness and the knower; in short: the world, the sensual body and the individual knower to which there is the Original Person of God as the fourth authority [see also B.G. 13: 19].

***: The actual perfection of yoga is, following verse 35 coming next, named Kṛṣṇa consciousness by the Vaiṣṇavas who defend the Bhāgavatam in the West.

---

Chapter 11 - The Lord's Opulence

---

(1) Śrī Uddhava said: 'You are the Supreme Spirit in person, not restrained and without a beginning and an end. You are the [true] protector and the maintenance, destruction and creation of all that exists. (2) Oh Supreme Lord, while You for souls lacking in self-control are hard to understand, the brahmin knowers worship Your presence within both the superior and the inferior entities of creation. (3) The great sages achieve perfection by worshipping You with devotion for this and that form. Please speak to me about these forms. (4) Oh Maintainer of All Beings, not being visible You are engaged as the Very Soul of the living beings. You see them while they, bewildered by You[r external reality], do not see You. (5) And, please, oh greatest Might, explain to me what all the potencies are that You manifest in all directions on earth, in heaven and in hell. I offer my obeisances at Your lotus feet, the abode of all holy places.'

(6) The Supreme Lord said: 'This question, oh best of all questioners, was at the time of the destruction posed by Arjuna who desired to fight his rivals [at Kurukṣetra, see B.G. 2: 54, 13: 1-2, 14: 21, 18: 1]. (7) Aware of the fact that the killing of his relatives for the sake of sovereignty was an irreligious, abominable act, he desisted and said in a worldly mind: 'Having them killed I would be the killer' [B.G. 1: 37-45, compare 2: 19]. (8) That tiger among men, asked Me just before the battle took place questions like you did and was then by Me instructed with the needed arguments.

(9) I am the Supersoul of these living entities, oh Uddhava, their Well-wisher and Lord and Master; I am the maintenance, creation and annihilation of all living beings. (10) I am the goal of those who seek progress, the Time of those who exert control, I am the equilibrium of the basic qualities of nature, as also the virtue of those endowed with good qualities. (11) I am the thread (the rule, sūtra) for everything that has quality, I am the totality of all great things, among that what is subtle I am the spirit soul, and of all things that are difficult to conquer I am the mind. (12) I am Hiraṇyagarbha [Brahmā, the original teacher] of the Vedas, among the mantras I am the three-lettered Omkāra, of the letters I am the first one [the 'a'], and among the sacred metres I am the three-footed one [the Gāyatrī mantra]. (13) Among the gods I am Indra, among the Vasus I am Agni, among the sons of Aditi I am Viṣṇu [Vāmana], and among the Rudras I am Nīla-Lohita [the one colored red-blue, Śiva. See also 3.12: 7]. (14) I am Bhṛgu among the brahmin sages, I am Manu among the saintly kings, among the demigod sages I am Nārada and among the cows I am Kāmadhenu [the cow of plenty]. (15) Among those of perfect control I am Kapila, Garuḍa I am among the birds, Dakṣa among the founding fathers, and Aryamā among the forefathers. (16) Oh Uddhava, know Me among the sons of Diti as Prahlāda, the lord of the unenlightened souls, know Me as the [order of the] moon for the stars and the herbs, and as Kuvera, the lord of wealth among the Yakṣas and Rākṣasas. (17) Among the lordly elephants I am Airāvata, I am Varuṇa, the master of the aquatics, of everything that heats and illumines I am the sun, and among the human beings I am the master of the realm [the king]. (18) Uccaiṣravā I am among the horses, among the metals I am gold, Yamarāja I am among those who exercise control, and among the serpents I am Vāsuki. (19) Among the hooded snakes I am Anantadeva, among the beasts with teeth and horns I am the lion, among the social orders [the status-groups, the āśramas] I am the fourth order [the sannyāsīs] and among the vocations [the varṇas] I am the first one [of the brahmins], oh sinless one. (20) Among the holy rivers I am the Ganges, I am the ocean among the expanses of water, I am the bow among the weapons, and among the wielders of the bow I am the destroyer of Tripura [Śiva]. (21) I am Meru among the abodes, among the places that are inaccessible I am the Himalayas, among the trees I am the aśvattha, and among the plants I am the ones bearing grains [barley]. (22) Among the priests I am Vasiṣṭha, among those vowed to the Veda I am Bṛhaspati, Kārtikeya [Skanda] I am among the military leaders, and among the foremost [of spiritual leadership] I am the unborn, supreme Lord [Brahmā, the Creator]. (23) Among the sacrifices I am the study of the Veda, among the vows I am the vow of nonviolence [vegetarianism], and among the purifiers fire, wind, sun, water, speech and soul I am the purest [the Supersoul]. (24) Of the [eight-fold] process of yoga I am the full restraint with the soul [the final stage of samādhi], to those desiring victory I am prudent counsel, I am the [metaphysical] logic of all discrimination [of distinguishing between spirit and matter], and for the speculative [opinionated, reputed] philosophers I am the diversity of views [śad-darśana]. (25) Among the ladies I am Śatarūpā [wife of Manu, see 3.12: 54] and among the men I am Svāyambhuva Manu. Among the sages I am sage Nārāyaṇa [see 10.87: 4] and among the celibates I am Sanat-kumāra. (26) Among the principles of religion I am renunciation, of all things basic I am the inner awareness, of the secrecy I am pleasant speech and silence, and of the sexual couple I am the unborn one [the original Prajāpati who is Brahmā, see 3.12:53-54]. (27) Of that what constitutes a stable vision I am the solar year, of the seasons I am spring, among the months I am Mārgaśīrṣa [November-December] and of the lunar mansions [the twenty-seven nakṣatras] I am Abhijit. (28) Among the yugas I am Satya-yuga, among the steady I am Devala and Asita, of the Vedic editors I am Dvaipāyana [Vyāsadeva], and among the scholars learned in spirituality I am Śukrācārya. (29) Among those named Bhagavān [the Supreme Lord] I am Vāsudeva, among My devotees I am indeed you [Uddhava], among the ape-like souls I am Hanumān, and among the scientists I am Sudarśana. (30) I am the ruby among the jewels, of all things beautiful I am the lotus cup, of all types of grass I am the kuśa grass, and of the oblations I am the ghee of the cow. (31) I am the wealth of those engaged in business, of the cheaters I am the gambling, I am the forgiveness of the tolerant, and I am the character of those in the mode of goodness. (32) I am the mental and physical strength of the strong. Please know that I am the [devotional] work performed by the devotees and that of My nine forms [nava mūrti] by which these Sātvatas are worshiping Me, I am the Supreme Original Form [Vāsudeva]. (33) Among the singers of heaven I am Viśvāvasu, and among the heavenly dancing girls I am Pūrvacitti. I am the steadiness of the mountains and the pure aroma of the earth. (34) I am the supreme taste of water and of what is most brilliant I am the sun. I am the effulgence of the moon, the stars and the sun, and I am the transcendental sound vibration in the ether [see also 11.15: 19]. (35) Among those devoted to the brahminical culture I am Bali, among the heroes I am Arjuna, and I am the generation, stability and dissolution of all living beings. (36) Of all the senses I am the potency of walking, speaking, evacuating, handling and enjoying [the karmendriyas], as also the touching, seeing, tasting, hearing and smelling [the jñānendriyas].

(37) All this I enumerated - earth, air, sky, water and fire, the ego, the greater [principle, the intellect], the [additional eleven] transformations [the ten indriyas and the mind], the person, that what is unmanifest and the modes of rajas, tamas and sattva - stands, together with the spiritual knowledge and the steady conviction [therewith], for Me, I, the One Supreme. (38) I, the Supreme Lord, the living entity, the [good] qualities and the possessor of the qualities, am the Soul of all; I am indeed everything, the one outside of whom nothing whatsoever exists. (39) I who create the universes by the millions, may count their atoms after a certain time, but not so My opulences [compare 10.14: 7]. (40) Whatever power, beauty, fame, dominion [see 11.15], humility, renunciation, enjoyment, fortune, strength, tolerance or wisdom one may find, all constitutes an integral part of Me. (41) All these spiritual potencies I briefly described to you [see also B.G. 7, 9 and 10] are transformations that by the mind are put in corresponding words [in the scriptures, in the teachings]. (42) [Therefore] control your mind, control your speech, control your breath and senses. Control yourself [through meditation] from within the soul, so that you will never again stumble on the path of material existence. (43) Of a transcendentalist who is not by meditation completely in control of his speech and mind, his vows, penance and charity will flow away like water from an unbaked pot. (44) Someone devoted to Me, should therefore control his words, mind and life air. With that intelligence thus being connected in devotion unto Me, he achieves his life's purpose.'

Chapter 12 - The Varṇāśrama System and the Boat of Bhakti: the Students and the Householders

(1-2) Śrī Uddhava said: 'Oh Lotus-eyed One, You previously described the religious principles of being devoted to You that are respected by all varṇāśrama followers and even by those who do not follow this system. Explain now to me how human beings by mindfully executing their occupational duties may arrive at devotional service unto You. (3-4) Dear Mādhava, oh Mighty-armed One, in the past You in the form of Lord Haṁsa approached Brahmā about the religious principles by which one finds supreme happiness [11.13]. After having ruled for such a very long time, oh Subduer of the Enemies, these principles that You have taught today, will no longer be common in human society [see also 5.6: 10 and 11.5: 36 and Kali-yuga]. (5-6) Dear Acyuta, there is no speaker, creator and protector of dharma other than You; not on earth and not even in the assembly of Brahmā where You are present in a supporting manifestation of Yours [viz. the Vedas, see also 10.87]. When the earth is abandoned by Your lordship, oh Madhusūdāna, oh Creator, Protector and Speaker, who then, oh Lord, will speak about the [knowledge that was] lost? (7) Please describe therefore to me, oh Master, oh Knower of All Dharma, who would qualify to observe the original duties that are characterized by devotion unto You, and how one should perform them.'

(8) Śrī Śuka said: 'He, the Supreme Lord Hari, thus being questioned by the best of His devotees, was pleased and then spoke, for the sake of the welfare of all conditioned souls, about the eternal duties of dharma. (9) The Supreme Lord said: 'This question of yours is one faithful to the dharma, it leads man to beatitude. Please, Uddhava, learn from Me about these forms of good [varṇāśrama] conduct concerning the societal status [āśrama] and vocation [varṇa]. (10) In the beginning in Satya-yuga there was [only] one class of human beings and they were called hamsa [swan]. The citizens of that age were by birth well known with the duties to be performed - hence the scholars know that age as Kṛta-yuga, the age of the fulfillment of duty. (11) One during that time with the Praṇava gave expression to the [not in four divided] Veda, knowing Me to be the duty in the form of the bull of religion [see 1.16: 18 and 1.17: 24]. Fixed in austerity and free from sins, one worshiped Me as Lord Hamsa. (12) At the beginning of Tretā-yuga, oh greatly fortunate one, in My heart from the prāṇa the threefold of knowing [the three Vedas, Ṛg, Sāma and Yajur] originated, whereby I appeared in the three forms of sacrifice [hence the name Tretā, see rtvik]. (13) From the Original Personality the intellectuals, the rulers, the merchants and the laborers [the varṇas] generated whose personal activities can be recognized as [respectively] those from the mouth, the arms, the thighs and feet [legs] of the universal form [compare 2.1: 37]. (14) The celibate students came from My heart, the householders are from My loins, from My chest those [of retreat] living in the forest found their existence and the renounced order of life is found in My head [see āśramas]. (15) The natures of the people of the different societal classes [varṇas] and status groups [āśramas] evolved according to the situation of their birth [in My body]: in a low position inferior natures evolved and in a high position superior natures developed. (16) Equanimity, sense-control, austerity, cleanliness, contentment, forgiveness, sincerity, devotion to Me, compassion and truthfulness are the natural qualities of the brahmins [compare 7.11: 21 and B.G. 18: 42]. (17) Ardor, physical strength, determination, heroism, tolerance, generosity, endeavor, steadiness, being mindful of the brahminical culture and leadership are the natural qualities of the kṣatriyas [My arms, compare 7.11: 22 and B.G. 18: 43]. (18) Faith, dedication to charity, straightforwardness, service to the brahmins and always engaged in the accumulation of money, constitute the natural qualities of the vaiśyas [My thighs, compare 7.11: 23 and B.G. 18: 44]. (19) Free from deceit being obedient towards the twice-born souls [the three higher varṇas], of service for both the cows and the divine personalities, as also being perfectly contented with the reward thus acquired, are the natural qualities of the śūdras [His feet or legs, compare 7.11: 24 and B.G. 18: 44]. (20) To be unclean, deceitful, lust, fiery and of constant hankering, constitutes the nature of those who occupy the lowest position [the outcasts]. (21) It is the duty of all members of society to be of nonviolence, truthfulness and honesty, to be free from lust, anger and greed and to desire the welfare and happiness of all living entities.

(22) A twice-born soul having undergone a second birth with purificatory rites [with saṁskāras receiving a sacred thread] and [initiation into] the Gāyatrī mantra, should reside in the residence [the school] of the guru and must, with his senses under control, on his request study the scriptures [see also B.G. 16: 24]. (23) Carrying a belt, a deerskin, a staff, prayer beads, a brahmin thread, a water pot and matted hair, he [the brahmacārī] without neglecting [*] his teeth and clothes, uses kuśa grass [to sit upon] and [does] not [desire] a pleasant seat. (24) Bathing and eating, attending sacrifices and doing japa, passing stool and urine, he does in silence [Vaiṣṇavas actually murmur doing japa]; he should not [fully] trim his nails or hair, including the hair under his arms and in the pubic area [see also śikhā]. (25) Someone under the vow of celibacy should never spill his semen and, when it flowed of its own, he should take a bath, control his breath and chant the Gāyatrī [see also ūrdhva-retāḥ]. (26) Purified with fixed attention, at the beginning and the end of the day performing his japa silently, he should serve the fire-god, the sun [see cakra], the ācārya, the cow, the brahmin, the teacher, the elder and the God-fearing soul [compare: 11.14: 35]. (27) He has to recognize Me in the teacher of example [the ācārya]. The ācārya he should never at any time enviously deny respect considering him a mortal being, for the spiritual master represents all the gods [see also rule of thumb and compare e.g. 7.14: 17, 10.81: 39, 10.45: 32 and 11.15: 27]. (28) In the morning and evening he should bring him the food that was collected and offer it to him together with other articles. In self-restraint he should accept what he allows [to be his share]. (29) He should always humbly be engaged in serving the ācārya, following him closely, proving his respect with folded hands wherever he goes, rests, sits or stands. (30) Thus being engaged he [the upakurvāṇa brahmacārī], free from [unregulated] sense gratification and without breaking the vow [of celibacy], should live in the school of the guru until the education is completed [see also Kumāras]. (31) If he [naiṣṭhika, faithful for the rest of his life] desires to climb up to the world of the verses [Maharloka], the heaven of Brahmā, he should, for the sake of his Vedic studies, offer his body to the guru with the great vow [of permanent celibacy, see yama]. (32) Actively engaged in the spirit and sinless, he should worship Me as being the Supreme Undivided Intelligence present in the fire, in the spiritual master, in himself and in all living beings [see also B.G. 5: 18, siddhānta and advaita]. (33) The first thing to be forsaken by someone [sexually ripe but spiritually directed who is] not running his own household, is to glance at, touch, converse and joke and such with [sexually receptive] women or other sexually active living beings [see 11.14: 29 and 6.1: 56-68]. (34-35) Cleanliness, washing one's hands, bathing, in the morning in the afternoon and evening, being of religious service, worshiping Me, visiting holy places, handling the prayer beads, avoiding things untouchable, things not fit for consumption and things not to be discussed - this Uddhava, constitutes the voluntary penance that, in order to restrain the mind, the words and the body with Me, I who reside within all beings, is enjoined for all spiritual departments [āśramas]. (36) A brahmin observing the great vow becomes as bright as a fire. Thus he burns his karmic mentality by the intensity of his penance and becomes a spotless devotee of Mine. (37) When after thus properly having studied the Vedic knowledge he [the brahmacārī] desires [to enter family life], he must offer the spiritual master remuneration and with his permission bathe himself, [put on nice clothes and leave **].

(38) Except for when he is My devotee, a true dvija [a person from the three higher classes] should either enter family life [gṛhastha], enter the forest [vānaprastha], or else become a monk, a mendicant ['samniyāsin' or sannyāsī]; he should move from one authorized societal position [āśrama] to the other and not act otherwise. (39) Desiring a household one should marry a wife with similar qualities who is beyond reproach and younger in age. When the first wife is of the same vocation another one may follow [of a lower class - varṇa - or subdivision of it, the caste - jatī]. (40) Sacrifice, Vedic study and charity are the activities of all twice-born souls, but only the brahmins practice the acceptance of charity, giving [Vedic] instructions and performing sacrifices for others [compare 7.11: 14]. (41) When a brahmin considers the acceptance of charity as detrimental to his penance, spiritual power and glory, he must subsist on the other two [of teaching and sacrifice], and when he considers also these two as incompatible with his spirituality, he must subsist on gathering ears of corn left behind in the field [live 'of the stones', see also 6.7: 36, 7.15: 30 and B.G. 9: 22]. (42) The body of a brahmin is not meant for futile sense gratification [and the consequent involuntary penances of war, disease and incarceration], it is meant for [voluntary] penances in this world and an unlimited happiness in the world hereafter [see also 11.6: 9 and B.G. 17: 14-19]. (43) With his consciousness perfectly contented in his occupation of gleaning grains and magnanimously, free from passion cultivating dharma, someone who has fixed his mind upon Me - and who is thus not that attached - can achieve liberation even when he lives a householder's life [compare B.G. 3: 22 and 10.69]. (44) He who delivers a brahmin surrendered to Me [or an experienced devotee] from a life of suffering [poverty], I before long, like a boat in the ocean, will deliver from all misery. (45) A king saves himself by delivering, like a father, his people from difficulties, just as a bull elephant without any fear for himself protects himself and other elephants [see also 4.20: 14]. (46) The human ruler who thus proceeding on earth removes all sins, will therefore enjoy heaven, together with the king of heaven [Indra] riding a heavenly vehicle as brilliant as the sun. (47) When a [Vedic] scholar suffers want, he can engage in doing business like a merchant, or suffering misfortune he must take up the sword [engage in politics]. In no case of misfortune he can behave like a dog [follow a lower master]. (48) A king in case of emergency may maintain himself by acting like a merchant, by hunting or by acting like a man of knowledge. But he can never follow the course of a[n obedient] dog. (49) A vaiśya may adopt the business of a śūdra and a śūdra may adopt the way of an artisan and make baskets and mats, but once he is freed from misery he must no longer desire a livelihood by engaging in a lower type of work [see also 7.11: 17]. (50) [Being a householder] one should perform worship on a daily basis for the demigods, the sages, the forefathers and all living beings as being My potencies, by studying Vedic knowledge, saying the mantras svadhā ['blessed be'] and svāhā ['hail to'], and by offering food and such, depending the prosperity one enjoys [see also 11.5: 41]. (51) Whether one's money was acquired without endeavor or acquired by performing one's straight duty, one should without burdening one's dependents, be of proper respect with the help of Vedic rituals. (52) One should not be fixed on one's family members nor get bewildered by them [trying to control them]; being wise one sees that things ahead are just as temporary as matters of the past. (53) The association with one's children, wife, relatives and friends is like an association with travelers; one is separated from all of them in a next body, just like a dream disappears that occurs in one's sleep [see also 7.2: 21, 9.19: 27-28]. (54) A liberated soul thus convinced who does not identify with the body and selflessly lives at home like a guest, will not get entangled in the domestic situation. (55) When one with the activities of a family life worships Me, one may as a devotee remain at home or enter the forest, or also, given responsible offspring, take to the renounced order. (56) Someone though whose consciousness is disturbed by his desire for a home, children and money, is in a state of bondage and thinks - henpecked - being of a miserly mentality, unintelligently in terms of I and mine. (57) 'Oh my poor old mom and dad. Oh my wife with a baby in her arms and, oh my young, unprotected children! How in the world can they live when they, wretched because of missing me, have to suffer greatly' [see e.g. also 11.7: 52-57]? (58) Such a person whose mind in his domestic situation thus is overwhelmed by thoughts and emotions, will because of his bewildered intelligence of constant concern about his family, find no satisfaction and land in darkness when he dies.'

*: The term adhauta used here means, according the Monier Williams Dictionary, the negative of dhauta, which means white, washed, and purified as also removed and destroyed. Concerning teeth and clothes this could mean unpolished teeth and unwashed clothes as also teeth not broken, neglected or rotting and clothes properly covering the body. So it is to the context of the other values of renunciation to decide what meaning would apply. Since adhauta in the first sense would be at odds with the value of cleanliness, śaucam [see e.g. verse 20 of this chapter and 1.17: 24], here therefore, contrary to previous interpretations, is chosen for the second sense of well maintained teeth and clothes properly covering the body, which is more in line with the normal code of conduct of Vaiṣṇava brahmacārī devotees in acceptance of a spiritual master [see also pp. 11.17: 23].

** : This process of 'tidying' is called the samāvartana-saṁskāra that marks the completion of the studies and returning home from living with the guru.

---

Chapter 13 - The Varṇāśrama System: the Withdrawn and the Renounced

---

(1) The Supreme Lord said: 'When one in the third phase of one's life wants to retreat into the forest, one should, in order to reside there peacefully, entrust the wife to one's sons or else together with her dwell in the forest. (2) One should arrange for the pure [*] sustenance of the bulbs, roots and fruits of the forest, and dress oneself with tree bark, grass, leaves or animal skins. (3) [In the forest] one should allow the hair on one's head and body, one's facial hair and nails [to grow], as also the filth of one's body, not [extensively] clean one's teeth, [but] bathe three times a day and [at night] sleep on the ground. (4) Thus proceeding one must ascetically tolerate the five fires during the summer [the sacrificial fires in four directions and the sun above], the torrents of rain during the rainy season, and the cold of winter when one is submerged in water up to one's neck [see also 4.23: 6]. (5) One eats what is either prepared on a fire, what has ripened by time or what was pulverized with a mortar, with a stone or ground with one's teeth. (6) One should personally collect whatever that is needed for one's sustenance depending the place, the time and one's energy, and understand that [living in the forest] one must not store anything for another time [see also 7.12: 19]. (7) A vānaprastha may choose for oblations [of rice, barley and dāl], may offer rice cakes or offer fruits according to the season, but he may never worship Me with sacrificing animals, [even though it is] mentioned in the scriptures. (8) As he did before [when he was a grhastha] he should perform the fire sacrifice, the sacrifice on a new moon day and a full moon day, as also the four months' sacrifice [of cāturmāsya], that are enjoined by the Vedic experts. (9) When he with that ascetic practice has worshiped Me, the sage [the vānaprastha] all skin and bones, from the world of the seers will achieve Me, the Goal of All Penance [see also maharloka]. (10) Is there a greater fool than someone who, for a long time being of this difficult but glorious penance which awards liberation, practices this penance for the purpose of trivial sense gratification [see also vāntāśī]? (11) When he in his regulated activities due to old age with his body trembling is no longer able to carry on, he should place the sacrificial fire in his heart, concentrate on Me and enter the fire [see also 7.12: 23]. (12) But in case full detachment from all result-minded action has developed in him and [the achievement of] a higher world means nothing more to him than hell, he may give up the [vānaprastha] sacrificial fire and take to the renounced order [see also B.G. 18: 2 and **].

(13) After having worshiped Me according to the injunctions and having given all he has to the priest, he [the vānaprastha] must place the sacrificial fire within his life breath and free from desires and worries wander about [as a sannyāsī, see also 9.6*]. (14) The demigods to begin with create obstacles for him in the form of his wife [and other allurements later on]; these he should surpass and transcend [see also B.G. 6: 25, 1.19: 2-3, 5.6: 4, 11.4: 7]. (15) If a sage wishes to wear clothes he uses another cloth to cover his loincloth [or kaupīna]. All the rest he gives up, besides a water pot and a staff [accepting] nothing else without necessity. (16) He should place his foot on a clear place [free from living beings], clear the water he wants to drink with his cloth, speak the truth in clear terms and engage in action with a clear mind. (17) Saying little, reserve and breath control constitute the strict disciplines for the voice, the body and the mind. He with whom these are not found My dearest, can, despite his bamboo rods, never be considered a real sannyāsī [see also tridaṇḍa]. (18) When he goes begging with the four varṇas he should at random approach seven different houses, avoid impure [sinful, polluted] households and be satisfied with whatever he acquired [see also cakra, compare 1.4: 8]. (19) He next somewhere outside has to go to a reservoir of water, wash himself and then without saying a word distribute the food that was begged and purified. Thereafter he should eat the food that remained in its entirety. (20) He should move about alone on this earth free from attachment, with his senses fully under control, and, satis-amused with the True Self, steady on the spiritual platform, be of an equal vision [B.G. 5: 18, see bhajan Ohe! Vaiṣṇava Ṭhākura]. (21) In a remote and safe place the sage, with his consciousness purified by his love for Me, should concentrate on the soul only as being non-different from Me. (22) By focussing in knowledge he must gain insight in the bound and liberated state of the self. He is bound when the senses are distracted and he is liberated when he has them under control [when he - devoted to Me - concentrates, meditates and gets absorbed, see also 11.10]. (23) The sage with his six senses [the five physical senses and the mind] fully under control being conscious of Me, having experienced the greater happiness of the soul, therefore should live detached from futile material desires. (24) He should travel to the pure places on earth with rivers, mountains and forests. The cities, towns and pasturing grounds he should enter only to beg for alms from those working for material purposes. (25) He in the withdrawn position of life should always go for alms, for by food [thus] obtained by begging [and not by performing fruitful labor, karma], he is freed from illusion and quickly achieves spiritual perfection. (26) He should never take the perishable things he sees with his eyes for the ultimate reality; with a consciousness free from attachment he should turn away from all designs for [material progress in] this life or a future existence. (27) Fixed in his [true] self he should no longer keep the universe in mind and thus arguing [as previously] forsake all that illusory energy that in the self binds together mind, speech and vital air [see ahankāra]. (28) Whether he in detachment is devoted to knowledge or as My devotee not even desires liberation, he [ultimately] should abandon the āśrama duties and their rituals, and move beyond the range of rules and regulations [see also 10.78: 31-32, 3.29: 25 and 5.1*]. (29) Despite his intelligence he [the detached soul, a sannyāsī] should play like a child, despite his expertise he should act as if incompetent, despite his learning he should speak like being absent-minded and despite his knowing the injunctions he should behave in an unrestricted manner ['wander as a cow']. (30) He should never attach to the [karma-kāṇḍa] Vedic philosophy [of sacrificing for the sake of return], nor should he heretically oppose it; he should refrain from scepticism and empty talk, nor take sides in [political] arguments. (31) Someone wise should never feel disturbed by other people nor should he disturb others. He should tolerate harsh words, never treat anyone with disrespect and never - like an animal to the interest of the body - with anyone create hostility [see also B.G. 12: 15]. (32) The One Supreme Soul is situated within all living beings as also within one's own body. Just like the one moon is reflected in different reservoirs of water, all material bodies are composed of the energy of the One [Lord, see also B.G. 6: 29 & 13: 34]. (33) He [the sannyāsī] should not feel dejected when there is no [or no proper] food, nor should he rejoice at times when there is plenty of food; he should be firmly fixed in the notion that both matters [of plenty and scarcity] are determined by fate [by the Lord]. (34) He should endeavor to eat and sustain his personal life force properly, for by that strength he contemplates the spiritual truth that, being understood, leads to liberation [see B.G. 6: 16]. (35) The food he happened to obtain he must eat, whether it is first class or of a low quality. Similarly the clothes and place to sleep must by a sage be accepted the way they came of their own accord [see also 7.13]. (36) General cleanliness, washing the hands, taking a bath and other regular duties are to be performed without any compulsion by a person of spiritual realization, just as [free as] I, the Controller, act according to the game I play. (37) For him the perception of things [as existing] separate from Me is over, for having Me in view such a perception is destroyed. Sometimes such a notion lingers till the body dies, but he will attain Me then. (38) He who has no notion of My dharma, but in his desire for spiritual perfection developed detachment from the lusty sense enjoyment that leads to unhappiness, should approach a wise [bonafide] spiritual master [of proper reference, a guru, see also B.G. 16: 23-24, 4: 34 & 17: 14]. (39) The devotee should serve the spiritual master who embodies Me, with great faith without envy and offenses for as long as it takes to arrive at a clear realization of the Absolute Truth [see also 11.17: 27]. (40-41) He though who is not in control of the six forms [of vice, the anarthas], who allows the charioteer of the body to be led by the senses, is bereft of knowledge and detachment, and just wants to subsist on [and not learn from] the three-stick staff, denies Me, himself and the divine personalities within himself and harms the dharma; not having overcome the contamination of this world he will also be lost and abandoned in the world hereafter.

(42) Nonviolence and equanimity constitutes the dharma of a mendicant [a sannyāsī], discrimination [between body and soul] and penance constitutes the dharma of someone living in the forest [a vānaprastha], protecting all living beings and performing sacrifices constitutes the dharma of a householder [a grhastha], and serving the teacher of example [the ācārya] constitutes the dharma of a celibate student [a brahmacārī]. (43) Of all those who worship Me with celibacy, austerity, cleanliness, contentment and being friendly towards all living entities, it is the householder who may approach his wife for intercourse at the proper time. (44) Someone who thus according to his dharma worships Me, who is not devoted to anything else and understands Me to be present in all living entities, will obtain unflinching devotional service unto Me. (45) Oh Uddhava, he will come to Me by bhakti, by loving service unto Me, the Supreme Lord of All Worlds, the Absolute Truth and cause, the origin and dissolution of everything. (46) When one thus by one's dharma has purified one's existence, fully understands My supreme position and is endowed with spiritual knowledge and wisdom, one will very soon reach Me. (47) The followers of the varṇāśrama dharma are characterized by this [traditional] code of conduct. This sense of duty combined with my bhakti awards the highest perfection of life. (48) Oh saintly soul, this what I described to you on your request, constitutes the means by which one as a devotee can be perfectly engaged in one's duty, and thus come to Me, the One Supreme.'

*: Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura quoting from the Manu-saṁhitā points out that the word medhyaiḥ or 'pure' in this context means that while residing in the forest a sage may not accept honey-based liquors, animal flesh, fungus, mushrooms, horseradish or any hallucinogenic or intoxicating herbs, not even on the pretext of a medicinal treatment.

Uddhava Gītā

** : Shastri C.L. Goswami comments here to his translation of the book: 'The śruti lays down that a brāhmaṇa may turn out to be a recluse whenever true vairāgya appears in him in whatever stage of life.'

---

Chapter 14 - The Perfection of Spiritual Knowledge

---

(1) The Supreme Lord said: 'Someone who, endowed with knowledge in accord with the oral tradition, is of self-realization and does not lose himself in speculations [about what would be true knowledge], must, known with the fact that this universe is a complete illusion, for both the sake of Me and spiritual knowledge renounce his worldly concerns. (2) For a person of spiritual knowledge I am the object of worship, the goal, the motive and final conclusion. Besides Me as his favorite, his light and final beatitude, he has no other purpose. (3) They who have fully perfected their knowledge and wisdom know My lotus feet as most auspicious. For that reason the learned transcendentalist who by means of spiritual knowledge holds on to Me, is most dear to Me [see also B.G. 7: 17-18]. (4) Performing austerities, visiting holy places, doing japa, giving charity or other pious activities cannot provide the perfection that is created by but a fraction of this spiritual knowledge [compare 10.46: 32-33]. (5) Therefore, oh Uddhava, knowing your true self in association with this spiritual discrimination that you accomplished by intelligence and consciousness, be of your personal way [svarūpa] of serving Me with devotion. (6) With the sacrifice of Vedic knowledge and wisdom, the sages achieved the highest perfection by worshiping Me, the Lord of All Sacrifices who is the Supersoul inside of them. (7) The transformation of the three departments [of nature, the guṇas] that surrounds you, oh Uddhava, constitutes an illusion that appears in the present [of the bewildering material energy] that is not there in the beginning nor in the end [of the universe]. In what sense can the being born and such of your material body, that at first did not exist, is not there afterwards, but only exists in between, have any relation to you [essence, your true self, your soul]?'

(8) Śrī Uddhava said: 'Oh Controller of the Universe, oh You in the Form of the Universe, please explain the yoga of devotion unto You that is also sought by the greatest souls. This devotion encompasses the extensive, perfectly pure knowledge endowed with detachment and wisdom, that carries the approval of the established tradition [of storytelling]. (9) Oh Lord, for the one who, tormented on the path of material existence, is overwhelmed by the threefold misery [see 1.17: 19], I see no other shelter but the canopy of Your two lotus feet that shower the nectar. (10) Please uplift this person who so badly craving for some insignificant happiness, bitten by the snake of time, hopelessly fell down in this dark pit [of material existence]. Oh Greatest Authority, pour out Your words of mercy that lead to liberation!'

(11) The Supreme Lord said: '[Yudhiṣṭhira,] the king who considered no one his enemy, in the past asked Bhīṣma, the best of the upholders of dharma, this question while we were all attentively listening [see 1.9: 25-42]. (12) When the war between the descendants of Bharata had ended, he, overwhelmed by the destruction of his beloved friends and relatives, after having heard about the many principles of religion, finally asked about the path of liberation. (13) I shall describe to you what was heard from the mouth of that soul vowed to the divine [Bhīṣma] in support of higher knowledge, detachment, self-realization, faith and devotional service. (14) That knowledge by which one recognizes the one element [of the Absolute Spirit, the Supersoul, the Lord, see 1.2: 11] within the nine, eleven, five and three elements of all living beings, has been determined by Me to be higher knowledge [jñāna]. (15) When one is not in that sense concerned with all the elements composed of the three basic qualities, but rather sees, as should, the One who brings about, maintains and annihilates this universe, one at that time speaks of self-realization [vijñāna]. (16) That what is there in the beginning, is halfway present from one creation to another, and still remains when there is the annihilation of everything, is what one considers true and eternal. (17) Vedic knowledge [śruti], direct experience [pratyakṣa], traditional instruction [aitihya or smṛti] and logical inference [anumāna] are the four forms of correct perception in facing the flickering nature by which a person masters [becomes detached from] the material diversity [see pramāṇa]. (18) Inauspiciousness is found up to the heaven of Viriñca [Brahmā] because all material routines [including rituals] are subject to change. An intelligent person should understand that, just like the things he sees, everything he is about to see is transitory [see also ṣaḍ-ūrmi, 11.3: 20 and B.G. 8: 16].

(19) Because of your love for Me I formerly talked to you about bhakti-yoga, oh sinless one. Let Me now also expound on the supreme process of devotional service unto Me. (20-24) Faith in the nectar of the narrations about Me, always recite [sing] My glories, to be fixed on ceremonial worship, to relate to Me with hymns and prayers; to have great respect for My devotional service, to offer obeisances with all of one's limbs, to be of first-class worship for My devotees, to think of Me as being present in all living beings, to dedicate all one's normal activities to Me, to describe with words My qualities, to offer one's mind to Me and reject all material desires; to give up wealth for My sake, to renounce sensual pleasures and material happiness, to be of sacrifice with charity and offerings, to do japa and to keep to vows and austerities for My purpose, are for human beings of surrender, oh Uddhava, the different forms of religiosity from which arises loving service unto Me - what other purpose would remain for My devotee [to be accomplished]? (25) When situated in peace one's consciousness is absorbed in the [supreme] soul, one achieves, being strengthened by the mode of goodness, religiosity, spiritual knowledge, detachment and opulence. (26) But when one, being fixed on the material variety, with one's senses chases in every direction and thus becomes a prisoner of one's passion, you should understand that one, by that [materialistic] consciousness dedicated to the impermanent, will achieve the opposite. (27) Dharma is said to lead to My devotional service and spiritual knowledge [jñāna] to witnessing the presence of the Supreme Soul. Detachment [vairagya] results in disinterestedness in the objects of sense gratification and opulence [aiśvarya] culminates in the mystical perfections of aṇimā and so on [perfections and powers, see 11.15 & 11.16 and bhaga].'

(28-32) Śrī Uddhava said: 'How many types of restrictions [yama] and regular duties [niyama] does one speak of, oh Subduer of the Enemy, what is equilibrium, what is self-control, dear Kṛṣṇa, what is tolerance and what is constancy, my Lord? What is charity and what is penance, what is heroism, what does one say about reality and truth, what is renunciation and wealth, what is desirable, what a sacrifice and what is religious remuneration? What do you think is the strength of a person, oh Fortunate One, what is opulence and gain, oh Keśava, what is education, what is modesty, what is superior, what is beauty and what is happiness as also unhappiness? Who is learned, who is a fool, what is the real path and what is the false path, what is heaven and what is hell, and who do You say is a friend and what is home? Who is wealthy, who is poor, who is a wretch and who is a controller; please speak to me about these matters as also about the opposite qualities, oh Lord of the Truthful Souls.'

(33-35) The Supreme Lord said: 'Nonviolence, truthfulness, not coveting or stealing the property of others, detachment, modesty, non-possessiveness, trustfulness, celibacy, silence, steadiness, forgiveness and fearlessness are the twelve types of restrictions [of yama]. [Inner and outer] cleanliness, doing japa, penance, sacrifice, faith, hospitality, worship of Me, visiting holy places, care for the welfare of others in contentment and serving the spiritual master, are the twelve regular duties [of niyama]. These two times twelve types of principles and duties that human beings remember and honor, My dear one, yield results [like beatitude or prosperity] depending each his desire [*]. (36-39) Mental equilibrium means the absorption of one's intelligence in Me [see also 11.16: 10] and self-control entails the disciplining of the senses. Tolerance means that one has to endure unhappiness and constancy entails the conquering of the tongue and genitals. The highest charity is to forsake the rod [to punish others] and giving up one's lust one thinks of penance. One is a hero when one conquers one's propensity to enjoy materially and there is sense of reality when one sees [the One, the Lord] equally present. Next [the truth] is found in the veritable and pleasing words as proclaimed by the sages. One speaks of cleanliness when one is detached from performing productive labor [see also e.g. 1.1: 2 and B.G. 18: 6] and in case of renunciation one speaks of sannyāsa [the renounced order]. Religiousness constitutes for human beings the wealth to be desired, and I Myself, the Most Fortunate One, the Supreme Personality, am the sacrifice. The spiritual reward follows upon wise instruction and the control of one's breath constitutes supreme strength. (40-45) Opulence is My divine nature [see 11.16 and bhaga], gain is My bhakti, education is the nullifying of the division of the self [see siddhānta and advaita] and modesty [sense of shame] is the disgust against improper action [sin]. Beauty means to be of good qualities - like being detached from material desires and such, happiness means to transcend both [material] happiness and distress, unhappiness is to rely on the [physical] happiness of lust and a wise person is someone who can tell the difference between liberation and bondage. A fool is someone who identifies himself with the body and so on [the mind etc.], the right path is the one leading to Me, the wrong path is to be understood as the one leading to a bewildered mind, and heaven implies the predominance of the mode of goodness. Hell is the domination by the mode of ignorance, one's real friend is the spiritual master who is Me, My dear friend, and the human body is one's home. He who is enriched with good qualities is called a rich person while a poor person is someone who is discontented. A wretched person is someone who did not subdue his senses, a controller is someone whose intelligence is not attached to the material affair, and someone attached to sense gratification is of the opposite [kind of qualities, a slave]. These, oh Uddhava, are the subjects of your inquiry I all properly have elucidated. But why should one elaborately describe the characteristics of good and bad qualities when thinking about good and bad still means that one fails to see the [true] quality [compare with 3.10: 28-29, 6.16: 10-11, 11.7: 8, 11.11: 16 and B.G. 7: 5].'

*: Patañjali formulates in his Yoga Sūtras II: 30-32, the restrictions and duties of the yoga adept as follows: "Nonviolence, love of truth, non-stealing, celibacy and the not striving for possessions together constitute the renunciation [yama]. This is the great universal vow valid independent of the place, the time, the circumstance and one's birth. Cleanliness, contentment, penance, consideration and surrender to the person of God constitute the regulation [niyama]."

Chapter 15 - Trikāṇḍa-Yoga: Bhakti Surpasses Knowledge and Detachment

(1) Śrī Uddhava said: 'The Vedic literature of Your Lordship, oh Lotus-eyed One, that pays attention to the injunctions concerning actions and prohibitions, deals with the good and bad sides of karma [akarma and vikarma]. (2) They also discuss the differences within the varṇāśrama system wherein the father may be of a higher [anuloma] or a lower [pratiloma] class than the mother, they are about heaven and hell and expound on the subjects of having possessions, one's age, place and time [see also 4.8: 54 and *]. (3) How can human beings without Your prohibitive and regulatory words concerning final beatitude, tell the difference between virtue and vice [compare 11.19: 40-45]? (4) The Vedic knowledge emanating from You offers the forefathers, the gods as also the human beings a superior eye upon the - not for everyone that evident - meaning of life, what would be the goal, and how we may achieve. (5) The difference between virtue and vice one can see with the help of Your Vedic knowledge and that insight does not arise by itself, but the Vedas also nullify such a difference and thus clearly confuse the issue....'

(6) The Supreme Lord said: 'The three ways of yoga I described in My desire to grant human beings the perfection, are the path of philosophy [jñāna], the path of work [karma] and the path of devotion [bhakti]; no other means can be found [for one's emancipation. See also B.G. contents and trikāṇḍa]. (7) For those who disgusted with fruitful labor [or sacrifices] forsake such activities, there is the yoga of spiritual knowledge, and for those who have not turned themselves consciously away and do feel for material happiness, there is the path of karma-yoga. (8) When it happens that in a person, who is neither averse nor very attached, faith awakens in My narrations and such, the path of bhakti-yoga will bring perfection. (9) For as long as one is not fed up [with one's material life] and no faith has awakened in My discourses and listening etc. [7.5: 23-24], one will have to continue with one's fruitful labor [see also 1.2: 7, 11.5: 41]. (10) Someone will not go to heaven nor to hell, oh Uddhava, if he holds on to his prescribed duties without deviating and, free from ulterior motives, is of worship with performing sacrifices [see also B.G. 8: 16]. (11) When one, existing in this world, free from sin is situated in one's duties and is pure [in one's motives], one obtains transcendental knowledge and eventually My bhakti [compare 1.5: 23-31]. (12) Just as the residents of hell, even the residents of heaven desire for this planet earth that is so conducive to the spiritual knowledge and devotional service, effective neither in hell nor in heaven. (13) A wise human being should not strive for hell or heaven, nor for this planet earth, because one gets bewildered when one enters a physical body. (14) Even though [the body is] subject to death, it brings the perfection of one's life purpose within reach. Someone who knows this should [therefore], before he dies, attentively endeavor for transcendence. (15) Not being attached a bird attains happiness after giving up the nest it made in a tree that was cut down by some messengers of death. (16) Knowing that with every day and night one's life span is shortened [likewise], one is beset with fear; free from attachment [though] one, with the intelligence of transcendence being without desires, attains perfect peace. (17) A person is the killer of his own soul when he, in this well suited boat of the so rarely attained but naturally acquired physical human body, does not cross over the ocean of material existence, being propelled by the favorable winds that I am, and with the spiritual master as the captain. (18) When a yogi, disgusted with material endeavoring, being detached is in full control of his senses, he has to concentrate his mind to stabilize it with self-discipline. (19) The mind being narrowed down to the spiritual platform should, when suddenly being drawn away, carefully - according to the rules of the game - be brought under the control of the self [see also B.G. 6: 26]. (20) When one conquers one's breath and senses, one should not forget what the actual purpose of the mind is. With one's intelligence perfect in goodness, it should always be led back under the supervision of the soul [to be its servant, see B.G. 3: 42]. (21) This restraining of the mind with the intimate confidentiality with which one also constantly observes a horse that one wants to tame, is what is known as the most supreme practice of yoga [see also B.G. 6: 33-34]. (22) By analyzing how all the different elements [of matter and the fields and principles of spiritual knowledge] cohere and are in conflict, how they originate and how they are lost, the mind should be kept attentive until [spiritually] satisfied. (23) The mind of someone who, guided by the instructions [of the spiritual master], being disgusted got detached, will by analysis of and meditation on what is perceived, give up its false identification [with matter and the body]. (24) The mind must not be focussed on any other practice than on the austerities and procedures of the [eightfold] yoga method, on logical analyses and spiritual knowledge, or on the exercises of respect for My form [thus on trikāṇḍa, threefold yoga: karma-, jñāna- or bhakti-yoga]. (25) When a yogi out of negligence commits a reprehensible deed, he should burn away that sin by means of the yoga method only; never at any time he should try this a different way [compare B.G. 1.5: 17, 4: 19, 9: 30]. (26) When each is firmly grounded in his own position one speaks of virtue, but because of the nature of karmic activities one is impure in one's engagement. Driven by desire to put an end to those [impurities or destabilizing] attachments, one consequently with this rule of virtue and vice [by Me, then] arrives at [the needed niyama] regulations. (27-28) When faith in my narrations and disgust with all karma has awakened in someone, he [the ātmānandi bhakta], knows that his lusts are the root of his misery, despite his lack of ability to [fully] renounce them. Even though sometimes being engaged in them, he should remain happy and resolute in that faith worship Me, repenting the sense gratification that makes him unhappy. (29) All the lusts a devotee has in his heart, are destroyed when his heart is firmly established in Me by constantly worshiping Me in the bhakti-yoga as described [see sthita-prajñā]. (30) The knots in the heart are cut, all misgivings are in shreds and the chain of fruitful actions ends, when one sees Me as the Supreme Soul of All. (31) For a yogi connected in My devotional service who fixed his mind on Me, for that reason generally neither the path of knowledge nor the path of detachment [from fruitful activities] is the way to become happy in this world. (32-33) When one happens to desire heaven, final beatitude or My abode, that what is obtained by fruitful action, penance, the cultivation of knowledge and detachment, that what is achieved by mystical yoga, charity, religious observances, auspicious actions or other methods, will by My devotee easily be achieved in being engaged in My bhakti. (34) Saintly persons well versed and skillful, devotees fully dedicated to Me, never desire anything but Me, I who grant them beatitude and freedom from birth and death. (35) It is said that it is best not to desire anything, so that with the one who does not seek any personal gain, that with someone who is fully independent, the bhakti unto Me may arise that grants the greatest happiness [see also 2.3: 10]. (36) With Me the unfavorable qualities of the modes of nature [like bewilderment, slowness and restlessness] cannot [again] manifest themselves in pure devotees, because they, free from desire, under all circumstances are stable in their consciousness. They now belong to those who moved beyond that what can be under-

They now belong to those who moved beyond that what can be understood with a materially motivated intelligence [see also B.G. 9: 30].

(37) Those who follow these methods I have now instructed, achieve the security of My abode in the direct perception of that what is the Absolute Truth.'

*: The vaidehakas consist of those born of a śūdra father and brāhmaṇa mother, the sūtas are those born from a kṣatriya father and a brāhmaṇa mother or from a śūdra father and kṣatriya mother. The mūrdhāvasiktas are those born of a brāhmaṇa father and kṣatriya mother. Ambaṣṭhas are those born from a brāhmaṇa father and vaiśya mother [these often work in the healthcare business]. Karaṇa indicates those born of a vaiśya father and śūdra mother or of a kṣatriya father and vaiśya mother.

---

Chapter 16 - On Distinguishing between Good and Bad

---

(1) The Supreme Lord said: 'They who give up My paths of jñāna, karma and bhakti, will, in the cultivation of their lusts and fickle senses, keep moving through the cycle of birth and death. (2) When one manages to be steady in one's position that is called virtue, while the opposite of it is considered vice; this is the conclusion about these two [see also B.G. 2: 16]. (3) What would be pure or impure concerning the religion, what would be vice or virtue in normal affairs and what would be favorable or unfavorable for one's physical survival, are matters [of good and bad] one must evaluate from the same category of elements, oh sinless one [what is good for the body e.g. is not necessarily good for the religion]. (4) This approach of matters I put forward for the sake of those who bear the burden of religious principles. (5) Earth, water, fire, air and ether are the five basic elements that, from Lord Brahmā down to the nonmoving creatures, constitute the bodies of the living beings who are all connected in the Supreme Soul. (6) Even though they consist of the same elements and in that sense are equal, the Vedas assign different names and forms to them in service of their self-interest, Uddhava [see varṇāśrama].

(7) What would be the right and wrong considerations concerning the time, place, the things and so on, is established by Me with the purpose of restricting materially motivated activities. (8) Among all places, those places are impure where there is no respect for the brahminical culture and no spotted antelopes can be found, where there are no saintly, cultured men even when there are spotted antelopes, where it is unclean like Kīkaṭa [a place of low-class men, see mleccha and *], places not consecrated and unprepared, and places where the earth is barren. (9) The time that by its nature [solar position, lunar phase] or by its objects [appointment by calendar and sundial] is suitable for performing one's prescribed duties is considered good and the time that impedes the performance of one's duties or is unsuitable [night time e.g. or times of different obligations] is considered bad [see also B.G. 7: 8, 11.20: 26, kāla and kālakūṭa **]. (10) The purity or impurity of a thing [or of a substance] is determined [validated] with the help of another thing, in respect of what one says about it, by means of a ritual performance [of purification], in respect of time or according to its relative magnitude [***]. (11) Whether it [- viz. the quality of a thing -] imposes accordingly a sinful [or pious] reaction upon a person depends on that person's power or impotence, intelligence, wealth, condition and place. (12) By a combination of time, air, fire, earth and water, or by each of them separately, [matters are purified, like] grains, things made of wood, clay and bone, thread, skins, liquids and things won from fire. (13) When something in touch with that what is impure removes a bad smell or dirt and thus restores the original nature of an object, one speaks of purification. (14) A twice-born soul should be pure in his activities with cleansing himself, in remembrance of Me, by bathing, charity and austerity, as also by performing his duties and purificatory rituals according to his age and individual capacity. (15) The purification derived from a mantra is a consequence of the correct knowledge about it. The purification by a certain act is the consequence of one's dedication to Me. Dharma [religiosity] prospers by [the purity of] the six factors [as mentioned: the place, the time, the substance, the mantras, the doer and the devotional act], whereas godlessness [adharma] is produced by the contrary.

(16) Sometimes though, a virtue turns out to be a vice and a vice - by providence [or Vedic instruction] - turns out to be a virtue. Respecting the regulative principles one is thus faced with the fact that the distinction between what is good and bad is factually effaced by them [4*]. (17) The same performance of karma because of which one person falls down is not the cause for another to fall down. Someone who fell [in love e.g.] does not fall any further; for such a one natural attachment changes into a virtue. (18) Whatever one desists from one is freed from - this is for human beings the foundation of religious life [natural pious living] that takes away the suffering, fear and delusion. (19) When one presumes the objects stimulating the senses to be good, a person will develop attachment as a consequence, from that attachment lust originates and because of that lust [to enjoy at will] there is quarrel among people. (20) Because of quarreling there is the anger that is difficult to handle and because of anger there is ignorance; and thus someone's broad consciousness is quickly overtaken by darkness [or narrowed consciousness]. (21) Oh saintly soul, a living being bereft that way [of clear understanding] becomes empty-headed so that, as a consequence having fallen away from the goals in life, such a person - just like dull matter - is as good as dead [compare B.G. 2: 62-63]. (22) Adhering to the sensual affair, vainly living the life of a tree, one fails in knowing oneself and others, so that one's breathing is nothing more than pumping air. (23) The awards promised in the [karma-kāṇḍa part of the] scriptures are for man not the highest good; they are merely enticements to create a taste for the ultimate good [upāsana-kāṇḍa], similar to what one says to make someone take a medicine. (24) From the moment they are born, mortals develop a mind of attachment to their family, their vital functions and the objects of their desire, because of which they lose sight of the interest of their soul. (25) Why would those of intelligence [the Vedic authorities] encourage souls to further engage in those [attachments], because of which they, on the path of danger blind to their real interest, in submission [to karmic actions] land in darkness [see also 5.5: 17]. (26) Some who thus with a perverted intelligence do not understand the purpose [of finding fulfillment in Kṛṣṇa], speak in [karma-mīmāṃsā] flowery language about [sacrificing for the sake of] material benefits; something about which he who really knows the Vedas does not speak [see also B.G. 2: 42-44]. (27) Those who are lusty, miserly and greedy take the flowers [of karmic sacrifices] for the fruit [of realization]; bewildered by the fire they suffocate from the smoke and do not realize their position [their true identity of being an individual soul instead of a body]. (28) Armed with their expressions, My dear, they do not know Me who is seated within their heart and from whom this universe generated that is also Me. In their self-indulgence they are like people staring into fog. (29-30) Not understanding My confidential conclusion [see also 10.87 and B.G. 9] they, absorbed in their sensuality, [as meat eaters] are attached to the violence [against animals] that may occur under conditions [in nature], but certainly never is encouraged for sacrifices. In reality they take pleasure in being violent against the animals that [without necessity] were slaughtered for their sense gratification. With their ritual worship of the gods, the forefathers and the leading spirits, they are mischievous people. (31) In their hearts they all - like business men investing their money - imagine to achieve in a world that in words sounds nice, but which is as unreal as a dream. (32) Established in the mode of passion, goodness or ignorance, they worship the gods and others headed by Indra who likewise delight in passion, goodness and ignorance; but Me they do not worship properly [thus, see also B.G. 9: 23 and 10: 24 & 25]. (33-34) [They think:] 'When we worship the demigods with sacrifices here, we will enjoy heaven, and when that has ended, we will turn back to earth in a nice home and a fine family.' With their minds thus bewildered by the flowery words [of the Vedas] they nevertheless, as proud and most greedy men, are not attracted to My topics.

(35) The trikāṇḍa divided Vedas have the spiritual understanding of the true self, the soul, as their subject matter, but also the seers, who esoterically express themselves more indirectly [the 'other gurus'], are dear to Me. (36) The transcendental [Vedic] sound [the śabda-brahman] manifesting itself [at different levels] in the prāṇa, the senses and the mind [of the pure, self-realized, enlightened person], is most difficult to understand; it is unlimited and as unfathomably deep as the ocean [see also 11.12: 17-18]. (37) The groundless, changeless Absolute of endless potencies that I promote [as My nature, see Om̐kāra], is represented within the living beings in the form of sound vibrations, just as in a lotus stalk there is the appearance of a single strand of fiber [see also 11.18: 32 and 6.13: 15]. (38-40) The way a spider weaves its web from the heart by its orifice, the breath of the Lord [the prāṇa] from the ether is manifesting the sound vibration through the mind in the form of the different phonemes. Full of nectar comprising all the shapes that branch out in thousands of directions, the Master, decorated with consonants, vowels, sibilants and semivowels, has expanded from the syllable om̐. By the elaborated diversity of expressions and metrical arrangements - that each have four more syllables -, He Himself creates and withdraws again the vast, unlimited expanse [of the Vedic manifestation of sound, see also B.G. 15: 15]. (41) For instance the metres Gāyatrī, Uṣṇik and Anuṣṭup; Bṛhatī and Pañkti as also Triṣṭup, Jagatī, Aticchanda, Atyaṣṭi, Atijagatī and Ativirāṭ [have each in this order four more syllables]. (42) The [confidential] heart of the matter of what these literatures [karma-kāṇḍa] enjoin [to be done], what they [upāsana-kāṇḍa] indicate [as being the object of devotion], what aspects they describe or what alternatives they [jñāna-kāṇḍa] thus offer [as philosophy], is in this world not known by anyone else but Me [compare 11.20, B.G. 4: 5, 7: 26, 10: 41]. (43) I am the One enjoined, I am the object of worship, I am the alternative [the philosophical hypothesis] that is offered and the One who is explained away [5*]. The transcendental sound vibration of the Vedas establishes Me as being their meaning, and elaborately describes the material duality as the department of the bewildering energy one has to emasculate to ultimately become happy.'

*: Śrīla Madhvācārya quotes from the Skanda Purāṇa as follows: 'Religious persons should reside within an eight-mile radius of rivers, oceans, mountains, hermitages, forests, spiritual cities or places where the śālagrāma-śīlā [a black oval river-stone suitable for worship] is found. All other places should be considered kīkaṭa, or contaminated. But if even in such contaminated places black and spotted antelopes are found, one may reside there as long as sinful persons are not also present. Even if sinful persons are present, if the civil power rests with respectable authorities, one may remain. Similarly, one may dwell wherever the Deity of Viṣṇu is duly installed and worshiped.'

** : The paramparā adds here: 'Political, social or economic disturbances that obstruct the execution of one's religious duties are considered inauspicious times.' Therefore the - form of, type of - time with which one achieves the association of the Supreme Lord or the Lord's pure devotee, is the most auspicious time, whereas the form of time which is politically, economically or socially determined and with which one loses such association, is most inauspicious. Religious timing - to the sun and moon e.g. - is sat-kāla, or true timing and proper conditioning, whereas humanly determined timing is asat-kāla, or time conditioning by false authority, a karma motivated time driven by ulterior motives. Scientifically it concerns a biological conflict at the level of the nervous system between natural stimuli of time, like the regularity of daylight, and the cultural stimuli of time that oppose with linear and generalized concepts of time like mean time and zone time. The time sense of modern man is for this reason disturbed, he suffers psychological time, an unstable sense of time which is fundamental to the cultural neurosis, or the problematic experience of one's culture.

*** : An example to illustrate this rather abstract formulation is the clock: the clock is pure or impure relative to its object measured: the time of nature as another 'thing' of time. This is called the criterion of scientific validation or the determination of the zero point of measurement. But also speaking of it in a scientific lecture telling that the mean of time, the clock deviating from nature, is derived from and refers to nature itself through a scientific formula that expresses the so called equation of time, is a political way of sanctifying, declaring the truth of, an obviously deviating clock. Furthermore there is also the religious ritual that presents the cross of Jesus Christ for instance, or the Mahāmantra of Lord Caitanya, to the standard of time on the clock in order to forgive the sin of the pragmatical deviating from Kṛṣṇa's nature of time and the scientific rationalization about it. Next we can simply set the clock to the nature of time, to the time of Kṛṣṇa, to be true to the religious insight [see Full Calendar of Order]. And finally, realizing that the confidentiality of Kṛṣṇa's time cannot be imposed politically, there is the purity to the relative magnitude, as this verse states, that with the modern complexity of time awareness can be respected with a dual display of time offered by some clocks or else with two clocks combined: one display set to nature and one to the politics of pragmatical timekeeping. Thus we can by this verse tolerate the impurity of profit motivated karmic time manipulations, and still manage with purity as devotees [Prabhupāda who on the one hand demanded punctuality, requested his devotees to further study the subject of time. 'All days and hours are the same to me. I leave that matter to you', he confided in 'A Transcendental Diary' by Hari Śauri Dāsa].

4* : The paramparā gives an example: 'Someone who abandons one's wife and children is certainly irresponsible and thoughtless. If one takes sannyāsa, however, and remains fixed on a higher spiritual platform, he is considered to be a most saintly person. Piety and sin therefore depend upon particular circumstances and are at times difficult to distinguish.' According to Śrīla Madhvācārya, persons above the age of fourteen are considered capable of distinguishing between good and bad and are thus responsible for their pious and sinful activities.

5* : This 'explaining away' of Him as an absolute norm is associated with the relationship between form and content. In bhakti one is faced with His form, the form of the ācārya and the form of the other devotees as the entrance gate giving access to the Vedic knowledge. Once having passed that gate on one's way inside, the gate for which the Lord stands with His form is of a lesser importance than the content taken care of by jñāna. When one has accessed the content, the form is just as obsolete as the package of a product is when one wants to use it after being bought. But Lord Kṛṣṇa is of course just as well the form as the content. In that sense one rather finds Him on one's way inside. The explaining away pertains to the form thus. Thus the necessity is demonstrated of the trikāṇḍa threefoldness of yoga: karma yoga constitutes the way, bhakti yoga constitutes the shop and jñāna-yoga shows the contents of spiritual realization to procure there.

Uddhava Gītā

---

Chapter 17 - Prakṛti and Puruṣa: Nature and the Enjoyer

---

(1-3) Śrī Uddhava said: 'Oh Lord of the Universe, how many basic elements of creation [tattvas] have been enumerated by the seers? Oh Master, I heard You speak about the twenty-eight basic elements of this world [see also 11.19: 14]. Some say there are twenty-six, others speak of twenty-five or twenty-seven, some speak of nine, some of four and others of eleven elements, while others speak of sixteen, seventeen or thirteen elements. Oh Eternal Supreme One, could You please explain to us what the sages, who so differently express themselves with the calculations of their divisions, have in mind with them?'

(4) The Supreme Lord said: 'With them [those elements] present everywhere, the brahmins speak the way it suits them, after all, what would there for those who lifted up [the veil of] My māyā, be difficult to say? (5) 'It is not the way you say it, it is the way I say it': this is what My unsurpassable [bewildering] energies do to those who argue about causes [see darśanas and 6.4: 31]. (6) Because My energies are interacting, differences of opinion arise among those who talk about this subject [of causation], but when one finds peace in the control over one's senses the controversy subsides and the arguing stops [one attains the true nature of the Supreme Spirit, ātmatattva]. (7) Because the various [subtle and gross] elements mutually pervade one another, oh best among men, a speaker wants to give a fitting description with an enumeration of causes and consequences. (8) With each of those divisions any single element refers to the other elements; whether it is there as a cause or an effect, when you see one element [like the ether] you also see all the other elements that element is part of [*]. (9) Discrimination as heard from the mouth of anyone who wants to reflect upon cause and effect, we accept [as authoritative], when that distinction originated from consistent reasoning. (10) A person is stuck to eternal ignorance and cannot all by himself figure out what the process of self-realization entails. That knowledge is derived from someone else familiar with the Absolute Truth [compare 11.21: 10]. (11) In this knowledge, belonging to the quality of goodness of material nature, there is not the slightest difference between the puruṣa - the Supreme Being, the Soul, the actual person - and īśvara the Lord. To suppose that it would be otherwise is a useless figment [see B.G. 18: 20 and 9: 15 and **]. (12) The basic qualities of goodness, passion and ignorance, as the causes of [respectively] maintenance, creation and destruction, constitute an equilibrium in material nature [prakṛti] but [do] not [control] the soul [see also B.G. 3: 27]. (13) In this world the mode of goodness is of knowledge [light], the mode of passion is of fruitive labor [karma] and the mode of ignorance is of a lack of wisdom. The interaction of the modes is called Time and [the combination of] their natural disposition [svabhāva] constitutes the thread [or lead, symbolically worn by the first three varṇas, see also 11.12: 19-21].

(14) The original person [puruṣa], the primary substance [prakṛti, elementary nature], the visible manifestation [mahat-tattva, the 'great principle'], the identification with the form [aḥaṅkāra, false ego], ether, air, fire, water and earth are thus the nine elements of creation I referred to [in verse 1]. (15) Hearing, touching, seeing, smelling and tasting are the five [senses] by which one acquires knowledge; the speech organ, the hands, the genitals, the anus and the legs constitute their operation, oh dear one, and the mind is there for both of them. (16) Sounds, tactile qualities, tastes, fragrances, and forms [or colors] are the categories of the sense objects [see viśaya] and speech, manufacturing, excretion [by anus and genitals] and locomotion are the functions covered by them. (17) In the beginning of creation the puruṣa uninvolved witnesses the material nature of this universe, the universe that by the operation of sattva and the other modes assumes the forms of the gross manifestations and subtler causes [see also 2.10: 10]. (18) All the elements of the visible manifestation [the mahat-tattva] and what belongs to it, received their potencies from the glance of the Lord [the Original Person], undergo transformation and create, amalgamated by the power of nature, the egg of the universe [see also 2.5: 35, 3.20: 14-15, 3.26: 51-53, 3.32: 29, 5.26: 38, 11.6: 16]. (19) With the five physical elements beginning with the ether on the one hand and the individual knower [the jīva] with the Supreme Soul [the Paramātmā] on the other hand, we speak of seven constituent elements as the foundation from which the body, the senses and the life air

[are produced]. (20) Departing from six elements one speaks of the Transcendental Person as the sixth element connected to the five material elements, the elements He first projected as His creation and thereupon entered. (21) When one speaks of four elements, fire, water and earth arise from the Original Self; from these elements this cosmos originated, the birth place of all material products. (22) Counting seventeen there is the consideration of the five gross elements, the five senses and their five objects together with the one mind and the soul as the seventeenth element. (23) The same way counting sixteen elements the soul is identified with the mind. With thirteen elements one has the five gross elements, the five senses, the mind and the [individual and supreme] soul. (24) Counting eleven elements one speaks of the soul, the gross elements and the senses. With the eight natural elements [the five gross ones, mind, intelligence and false ego] and the puruṣa, the Original Person, one thereupon has nine. (25) In this way the various divisions of the tattva elements have been contrived by the seers, all logically being supported by rational arguments; with the sages there is no lack of clarity.'

(26) Śrī Uddhava said: 'Because both nature and the enjoyer [prakṛti and puruṣa], despite being constitutionally different, cover one another, oh Kṛṣṇa, there seems to be no difference between the two: one sees the soul within nature and nature within the soul [see also B.G. 18: 16]. (27) Please, oh Lotus-eyed One, All-knowing and Very Expert in Reasoning, cut down with Your words the great doubt in my heart. (28) The living beings receive from You the knowledge that by the potency of Your outer illusion is stolen away [again]. Only You understand the real nature of Your illusory power and no one else [see also B.G. 15: 15].'

(29) The Supreme Lord said: 'Prakṛti and puruṣa [nature and the enjoyer] are completely different, oh best of all persons. This creation [prakṛti] is subjected to transformation because of the interaction of the guṇas. (30) My dear, the deluding energy consisting of the three modes establishes by those basic qualities a diversity of combinations and mentalities. This changeable nature based upon the guṇas is of three kinds, one is called adhyātma, the next adhidaiva and another adhibhūta [see also kleśas and 1.17: 19]. (31) In this world one's sight [adhyātma, as caused by oneself], that what one sees [adhibhūta, as caused by others] and the light upon it [adhidaiva, as caused by nature], create each other's perfection with the sun independently in the sky. [So too] the [Super]soul, the original cause separate from these three aspects, by its own conscious experience acts as the perfection of all that was achieved. (32) Next to the eyes the same [trinity] applies to the sense of touch and what one feels with it, to the ear and what one hears, to the tongue and its occupation, to the nose with what is smelled and to one's consciousness together with its attributes. (33) The agitation of the modes takes place on the basis of the primal ether and leads to changes [or pradhāna constitutes the cause of the time phenomena]. The principle of the intellect [the mahat-tattva, see also ***] therefrom gives rise to a false I-awareness that is the cause of three different types of bewilderment: emotion [vaikārika], ignorance [tāmasa] and sensual pleasure [ain- driya]. (34) Lacking the full knowledge of the Supersoul one says things like 'this is real and that is not real' with the focus of discussion on material dualities. Although useless, such [speculations] will not cease for as long as persons have turned their attention away from Me, their true abode.'

(35-36) Śrī Uddhava said: 'How do those souls whose minds are diverted from You by the fruitful activities they perform, oh Master, accept and give up higher and lower material bodies? Please Govinda, explain to me what by those, who are not that spiritual, is not understood because they, predominantly with the knowledge of this world, were cheated.'

(37) The Supreme Lord said: 'The mind of the people ruled by their fruitive labor, is bound to the five senses. Traveling from one world to the next, the soul, which has a separate existence, follows that mind [see also liṅga, vāsanā and B.G. 2: 22]. (38) The mind that depending its karma always contemplates, rises because of what is seen or heard through the senses, but inert [when dying away from the sense objects] the remembrance [of that life] is then lost. (39) This total forgetfulness of the living entity in which it does not remember a self that for this or that reason was absorbed in the objects of the senses, is what one calls death. (40) Oh man of charity, what one calls birth is when a person completely identifies himself with the body he assumed, just like what one does in a dream or when one has a fantasy. (41) And just as one in a dream or fantasy has no remembrance of a previous dream or fantasy, one neither thinks of having had a previous existence [*4 en B.G. 4: 5]. (42) Because of the creation of this sense refuge, this body, a threefold notion [of being of a high, middle or low class birth] appears concerning the form assumed. This leads the person to [believe in] an outer duality also found inside, like giving birth to bad offspring. (43) My best one, created bodies constantly find and lose their existence as a consequence of Time, the imperceptible stream not seen for being that subtle. (44) The lifespan, the circumstances and such of all created beings are determined by it, just like the flame of a candle, the stream of a river and the fruits of a tree are. (45) One has it wrong when one says 'this light is the same as this lamp' and 'this flow of water is the same as this river'. The same way it is wrong to say that 'this human [body] is the same as this person'. It is a way of reasoning by which men are wasting their lives [see also 6.16: 58, 7.6: 1-2]! (46) Actually this person does not take birth from the seed of his own activities, nor does he die. He is immortal and is only by illusion joined [with this body], just like fire in firewood [see B.G. 2: 24]. (47) Impregnation, gestation, birth, infancy, childhood, youth, middle age, old age and death are the nine stages of the body. (48) These superior or inferior physical conditions - that one owes to one's own motives [of karmic rebirth] -, a soul accepts as his own because of being bound to the modes, but sometimes he [by the grace of the Lord with due effort in yoga] manages to distance himself from them. (49) From the birth of one's offspring and death of one's forefathers one may conclude to the truth [of one's own life]. He who properly understands the characteristics of this duality [and thus knows he is the continuing soul] is no longer subject to this generation and destruction of things. (50) Someone knowing about the seed and maturity of a tree, is the witness distinct from the birth and death of that tree. One is the same way the witness separate from the [birth and death of] the physical body. (51) An unintelligent person who fails to distinguish between soul and matter and in touch with matter takes the external world for the real thing, lands completely bewildered in the cycle of birth and death [see also B.G. 9: 21-22 and 1.7: 5]. (52) Wandering around because of his karma he, when he follows the mode of goodness, will go to the sages and the gods. Following the lead of passion he will move among the common people or among the demons, and by the mode of ignorance he will find himself among the ghosts and spirits or reach the animal kingdom [see also B.G. 6: 41-42, 9: 25; 17: 4]. (53) Observing dancing and singing persons one tends to imitate them. The same way one is, despite [as a silent witness] not being engaged, inclined towards a material intelligence when one is faced with the qualities of matter [see also 11.21: 19-21]. (54-55) Just as trees seem to move when seen in water that moves and the world seems to spin when one's eyes are spinning around, one's mental impressions of experienced sense objects are neither real. Just like the things one sees in a dream are but figments of one's imagination, also the soul's image of a life of birth and death is but a phantom. (56) For someone meditating the objects of the senses, material life will not stop despite being an illusory affair, just like the occurrence of unpleasant things in a dream [may repeat itself *5]. (57) Therefore Uddhava, do not delight in the sense objects that play games with the senses. Just see how one, based upon the illusion of the material duality risen within the self, fails to realize the soul. (58-59) When one is insulted, neglected, ridiculed or envied by bad people, or else chastised, held captive or deprived of one's means of livelihood, or when one is repeatedly spat or urinated upon by ignorant people, someone desiring the Supreme who thus being shaken is having difficulties, should save himself by resorting to his essence [see also 5.5: 30].'

(60) Śrī Uddhava said: 'How do I learn this? Please, oh Best of All Speakers, tell us that. (61) The offenses of ignorant people against oneself, is what I find most difficult to tolerate. Even for scholars it is difficult, oh Soul of the Universe. Except for those who, fixed in Your dharma, in peace reside at Your lotus feet, material nature no doubt constitutes the greatest burden.'

*: Two examples: A pot is part of the element earth and earth is part of a pot. All matter is part of the ether [substantial space] and ether is part of all the elements.

** : The paramparā adds here: 'Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu described the actual situation as acintya-bhedābheda-tattva - the supreme controller and the controlled living entities are simultaneously one and different. In the material mode of goodness the oneness is perceived. As one proceeds further, to the stage of viśuddha-sattva, or purified spiritual goodness, one finds spiritual variety within the qualitative oneness, completing one's knowledge of the Absolute Truth' [see also siddhānta].

***: To differentiate the basic terms used in this chapter: Prakṛti is the material nature with its living beings and guṇas, pradhāna is the primordial, undifferentiated state of matter without the specific creatures and guṇas and the mahat-tattva is the totality of the greater reality of it all, also known as the principle of intellect or the cosmic intelligence. The puruṣa is the original person who is the enjoyer: the Lord and the living beings who are the same in quality.

*4: According to the well-known exception that confirms the rule says Śrīla Viśvanātha Cakravartī Ṭhākura here that by the mystic power of jāti-smara one may remember one's previous body. Patañjali in the Yoga Sutra III.18 says: 'Impressions which, carried along in the self, surface, give insight in previous states of life'.

*5: The classical philosophical stance defended here is: 'When one has a body one is a soul, when one is a body one is a pig', where the pig is here the fallen soul returning time and again to a materialistic life.

---

Chapter 18 - Forbearance: the Song of the Avantī Brāhmaṇa

---

(1) The son of Vyāsa said: 'After Uddhava, the greatest of the devotees, had said this to Him, the chief of the Dāśārhas whose heroism is so worth mentioning, He praised His servant for his words and replied. (2) The Supreme Lord said: 'Oh disciple of Bṛhaspati, in this world there is virtually no pious soul capable of keeping his mind in check after being disturbed by the insulting words of an uncivilized person. (3) A person is not as much hurt when pierced by arrows through a sensitive part of his body, as by the painful arrows of the harsh words of uncivilized people getting lodged in his heart. (4) In this regard, Uddhava, a most pious story is told. Please listen carefully, I shall describe it to you. (5) It was related by a mendicant who, upon being insulted by bad people, kept his composure reminding himself that it happened as a consequence of his past deeds. (6) In Avantī [in the district of Malwa] there once lived a certain brahmin, very rich with many opulences, who earned his livelihood doing business; but he was a miserly person, full of lust, greed and very prone to anger [see also B.G. 2: 49]. (7) He had no respect for his relatives and guests, not even in words, nor catered he, devoid of religiosity, timely to his own needs. (8) His sons, in-laws, his wife, daughters and servants turned against the miser with his bad character and in disgust withheld their affection. (9) Thus lacking in dharma as also in pleasure, the five claimants of sacrifice [the deities, see pañca-bhāga] became angry with that obsessive treasurer who failed for both the worlds [this and the next]. (10) By his neglect of them he lost all his credit, oh magnanimous one, and all the wealth he so painstakingly had troubled himself for was lost. (11) Oh Uddhava, a part of the wealth of this so-called brahmin was seized by his relatives, some by thieves, some by providence, some by time, some by common people and some by higher authorities [see also 10.49: 22]. (12) When he had lost his property a hard to endure anxiety arose in him who, devoid of religiosity and pleasure, was neglected by his kin. (13) Thus ruminating he, choked with tears, for a long time lamented in pain over his lost riches, whereupon a great feeling of disgust for worldly affairs came over him.

(14) He then said to himself: 'Alas, how painful to trouble myself that much with all this toiling for money that brought me neither pleasure, nor served the dharmic purpose. (15) In general the wealth of misers never ever results in any happiness: in this life it leads to self-torment and when they die they end up in hell with it. (16) However pure the reputation of the famous may be or however praiseworthy the qualities of the virtuous are, it is all destroyed with a little greed, just like what white leprosy [vitiligo] does with an enchanting, physical beauty. (17) In the building up, realizing, increasing, protecting, spending, losing of and rejoicing with capital, man must toil, fear, worry and live with uncertainty. (18-19) Theft, violence, lies, duplicity, lust, anger, perplexity, pride, discord, enmity, lack of faith, competition and [the three] dangers [of intoxication, promiscuity and gambling, see also 1.17: 24], are the fifteen unwanted things known by man as the consequence of fostering riches. He who desires the ultimate benefit in life should therefore keep the undesirable, which poses as wealth, at a great distance. (20) One's brothers, wife, parents and friends who are unified in love, all, from one moment to the next, turn into enemies over a single penny. (21) For the smallest amount of money they agitated give in to anger, and very quickly, as an adversary out for destruction, forget their goodwill and turn you down in the wink of an eye. (22) They who do not appreciate it as a human being to have achieved a birth the immortals pray for, with next to that [having the option of even] a superior second birth, destroy their self-interest and head for an unfavorable destination [see also B.G. 16: 19-20]. (23) What person who achieved this human life, this gateway to heaven and liberation, would attach to property, a realm of meaninglessness where one is subject to death? (24) When one does not share with those who deserve a share - the greater family of the gods, the seers, the forefathers, one's relatives, the living entities and oneself - one falls down like a money minded Yakṣa. (25) What can one do as an old man when one, maddened by one's youth, strength and wealth - the means by which a smart man settles for his perfection - has wasted one's life endeavoring for money [and status etc., see B.G. 3: 35]? (26) How does [even] a man of intelligence fall victim to a never ending, vain pursuit of wealth? All the world is most bewildered enchanted by some kind of inescapable illusory power! (27) What is the use of the goods or those who provide them, or what would be the use of the objects of desire or the people who try to satisfy you? Or, differently stated, of what use is it for someone in the grip of death to be engaged in fruitful activities that only lead to yet another birth? (28) The Supreme Lord, the Supreme Personality who comprises all the gods and who, satisfied with me, led me to this condition of detachment, constitutes the boat for the soul [to cross the material ocean. See also 11.17: 44]. (29) With the time remaining [in my life] I will, free from confusion about my true self-interest, restrict my body to the minimum and find peace within my self [see also 2.2: 3, 7.12: 6]. (30) May the gods, the controllers of the three worlds with this be pleased with me. Was it not Khaṭvāṅga [see 9.9: 41-47] who achieved the spiritual abode in a single moment?'

(31) The Supreme Lord said: 'Thus making up his mind, the most pious brahmin from Avantī untied the knots [of desire] in his heart and became a peaceful, silent mendicant. (32) He wandered this world alone and inconspicuous, and entered, with his self, senses and vital air under control [see tridaṇḍa], its cities and villages to subsist on charity. (33) Seeing him as an old, dirty beggar, low-class people dishonored him with many an insult, oh blessed soul. (34) Some stole away his triple staff, his begging bowl, his water pot and his seat, while others took his prayer beads and his torn rags. Showing them to him they offered them back and then took them again away from the sage. (35) When he at the river shore wanted to enjoy his share of the food he had acquired by begging, the grave sinners urinated upon it and spat on his head. (36) He who after his vow of silence did not speak, they would challenge to speak, beating him when he kept silent. Some shouted: 'This one is a thief' while others said: 'Tie him up, bind him!' and bound him in ropes. (37) Some taunted him with disrespect like: 'This one is a religious hypocrite, a cheater who lost his wealth, was thrown out by his family and has now taken to this profession.' (38-39) 'See how this person, who in his silence pursues his goal as powerful and steadfast as the king of the mountains, is as firmly determined as a [deceptive] heron.' Some ridiculed him speaking thus, while others passed foul air and, binding him in chains, kept the brahmin captive like a pet animal. (40) Thus subjected to [the three types of] impositions, as caused by other living beings, by higher powers and by his own nature [see kleśa], he understood that whatever came his way, befell him because of fate. (41) Being insulted by lowly people trying to get the better of him he, fixed in goodness keeping firm to his duty, sang the following song [see also B.G. 18: 33].

(42) The brahmin said: 'These people are not the cause of my happiness or distress, nor can I blame the demigods, my body, the planets, my karma or the time. It is, according to the standard authorities [the śruti], nothing but the mind that causes someone to rotate in the cycle of material life. (43) The mind acquiring the qualities of the modes, becomes very strong because of them and thus gives rise to the different sorts of white [good], red [passionate] and black [ignorant] activities, that lead to the conditions [the societal classes] corresponding to those colors. (44) The uninvolved Supersoul of transcendental enlightenment as a friend exists along with - and perceives - the struggling mind, that, with the image of the world it carries, embraces the objects of desire. It is in the engagement with the modes of nature that the individual soul [bewildered by that mind] gets entangled in attachment [see also B.G. 3.42-43]. (45) Charity, one's prescribed duty, niyama, yama, and listening [to the scripture], pious works and the purification by vows, all entail the subduing of the mind and have as their aim the absorption of the mind [samādhi] that constitutes the supreme [self-realization] of yoga. (46) What would be the use of charitable rituals and such for someone whose mind has been pacified by perfectly being absorbed [in Him]? Or, why would one in addition, occupy oneself with these processes of distribution and such when one has lost one's way with a mind not under control? (47) Other gods [and the senses they represent] have always fallen under the control of the mind that itself never allows the control of anything [or anyone] else. It constitutes a fearsome god stronger than the strongest and the One who [in the form of His mantras] can bring it under control, is therefore the God of gods [see also B.G. 6: 35-36, *]. (48) When one [being worldly engaged] fails to subdue that difficult to conquer enemy [see B.G. 6: 6] tormenting and attacking because of its unmanageable urges, some therefore being utterly bewildered create useless quarrels and are thus, with the mortals in this world, friends, neutrals and rivals. (49) People whose entire mind is seized by their body, think in terms of 'I' and 'mine' and are thus blinded in their intelligence. Because of this difficult to defeat illusion of 'this I am' and 'that is someone else', they wander around in darkness. (50) When you say that [adhibhautika] another human being is the cause of your happiness or distress, you may wonder what this means for the soul; happiness and distress [thus seen] belong to the earth [and not to the soul who finds happiness by self-realization]. With whom can you be angry about the pain when your tongue happens to be bitten by your own teeth? (51) When you [adhidaiivika] say that the gods are responsible for your suffering, then how would that relate to your soul? That suffering pertains to the changeable nature [of the senses and their rulers, the soul stands apart from]. With whom should you be angry when one limb of your body hurts another limb? (52) When you say that the soul itself [adhyātmika] would be the cause of your happiness and distress, such a difference would be part of your own nature. But how can one blame anyone when there is only the soul and nothing outside - neither happiness nor distress? That difference after all would be unreal then [see B.G. 2: 14]. (53) If the planets would be the cause of one's happiness and distress, how would that relate to the soul who is unborn? The heavenly bodies relate to that what is born. A planet is only troubled by other planets, so they [the astrologers] say, so with whom should the living being distinguished from his body [and his planetary positions] be angry then? (54) If you assume karma to be the cause of your happiness and distress, what does that karma then mean to your soul? Certain is that with the animating person on the one hand and this animated body on the other hand endowed with consciousness [that on itself is] not alive, neither of both constitute the root cause of your karma. What is there left to be upset about then? (55) And if we say that time would be the cause of our happiness and distress, where do we find the soul in that notion? The soul is not equal to the time [phenomena], the way fire is not equal to its heat and snow is not equal to [cold]. With whom must one be angry when there is no duality in the transcendental position [see also B.G. 18: 16 and time quotes]? (56) For him, [the spiritual soul] superior in transcendence, there is not from anyone, from whatever side or in any way the influence of the duality [of happiness and distress], the influence of the world of opposites, as can be seen with the arising false ego [of the mind being seized] that shapes one's material existence. He who awakens to this intelligence has nothing to fear from the material creation [with all her living beings]. (57) By the worship of Mukunda's feet I will cross over the difficult to defeat ocean of material neuroscience. I am certain of this because of the foregoing great seers [or ācāryas] who were firmly fixed in the worship of the Supreme Soul [see also B.G. 6: 1-2].'

(58) The Supreme Lord said: 'While he had lost his wealth and gotten detached, while he had left his home and free from moroseness traveled the earth, the sage, despite being insulted by rascals, did not forsake his duties and spoke this song. (59) There is no other cause of happiness and grief than the bewilderment of someone's mind that in material life out of ignorance created its friends, neuters and enemies [see also 10.32: 17-22, B.G. 9: 29]. (60) Therefore, My best, bring in every respect with an intelligence absorbed in Me, the mind under control and [attain] thus being connected the essence of the science of yoga [see also Śrī Śrī Śikṣāṣṭaka verse 1]. (61) Whoever with full attention meditates on, makes others listen or listens himself to this [song] based upon the knowledge of the Absolute as sung by the mendicant, will for certain never [again] be overwhelmed by the dualities [of happiness and grief].'

*: Some think that the essence of yoga is to stop the mind all together, but Kṛṣṇa stresses in this chapter clearly that it is about the control, not the stopping. That stopping is an impersonalist māyāvāda buddhist technique to concentrate on one's essence and constitutes a willfully created illusion [see Buddhism]. Saying neti-neti like Prahāda e.g., the mind will indeed concentrate on the essence which exactly will boost the mind in that direction. So with the stopping of its worldly engagement, the real engagement of the mind in prayers and philosophy begins. Not going for the siddhis, the mystical perfections, the mind must thus be engaged for the Fortunate One, for Kṛṣṇa, by means of concentration on His names, mantras and stories. By śravanam, kīrtanam etc. one has to learn to listen, sing and follow according to the scripture, the guru and the co-believers. The first two yoga sūtras I.1 & 2 atha yogānuśāsanam, yogaḥ citta vṛtti nirodaḥ, should be translated with 'as the lesson of yoga, now curb the rumination of the mind about worldly things' and not with 'your yoga lesson now is to stop the mind from working'. Of course one has to use one's mind, in obedience to the Holy Spirit, to the voice of God; the mind is after all an aspect of the divine ruled by Aniruddha in the catur vyūha (see also vṛtti and siddhi).

Uddhava Gītā

Chapter 19 - Analytic Knowledge, Sāṅkhya, Summarized

(1) The Supreme Lord said: 'I shall now discuss with you the analytic knowledge as established by the classical authorities. Knowing this a person can immediately give up the bewilderment based upon the material duality. (2) In the first age of dutifulness [Kṛta], in the beginning when there were [only] persons expert in [spiritual] discrimination, as also before that time [during the period of annihilation], the Knower was simply one and the same as the [universe] known [see also 11.22: 29]. (3) That One Great Undifferentiated Truth inaccessible to speech and mind [Brahman], turned into the two forms of material nature on the one hand and the enjoyment [of the enjoyer of that result] on the other hand [see 11.22]. (4) One essential half, material nature [prakṛti], is she [the 'mother'] who is of a dualistic nature, while he, the other entity, the knower, is called the puruṣa [the enjoying person or male principle]. (5) By My agitation of the elementary nature [in the form of time, of kāla], the modes of tamas, rajas and sattva [the guṇas] have manifested in order to fulfill the desires of the living entity. (6) From them the thread [the activating principle of the sūtra] arose, together with the principle of intelligence [mahat]. From the transformation of mahat came about the false ego [the ahaṅkāra of the puruṣa who identifies with the object of perception] that is the cause of bewilderment. (7) That I-awareness is thus of the three [guṇa] categories and [accordingly makes] with clarity, emotion and ignorance [alternately use of] the sense objects [tanmātra], the senses [indriyas] and the mind [manas]. Thus it [the identified self] constitutes the cause of understanding and not understanding [the so-called conscious and unconscious]. (8) The darkness of the false ego gave rise to the subtle sensations [or perceptions] of gross matter, its emotion awakened the senses and the clarity of the identified self called for the eleven gods [see deva]. (9) Because all the elements combined to function under My influence, they brought about the egg of the universe that serves as My supreme residence [see from 11.22: 18].

(10) I appeared [as Nārāyaṇa] in the egg that was situated in the water of the causal ocean, and from My navel a lotus arose that is known as the universe. On that lotus the self-born one found his existence [Brahmā, see 3.8]. (11) He, the soul of the universe endowed with passion, created from his penance by My mercy the three different worlds called earth, the atmosphere [or ether] and heaven [bhūḥ, bhuvah and svah], as also its rulers [see Gāyatrī and loka]. (12) Heaven became the residence of the demigods, the atmosphere the home of the ghostly spirits, the earthly places offered the humans and other living beings shelter and the place beyond these three is there for the Siddhas, the souls of perfection [Siddhaloka]. (13) The places of the underworld were by the master created as the residence for all asuras ['unenlightened souls' or demons] and those perfect in their ego [the 'snakes', the Nāgas]. All the destinations of the three worlds thus owe their existence to the fruitful activities proper to the modes [see B.G. 4: 17, 10.1: 42-43]. (14) By penance, yoga and by forsaking [in sannyāsa] one is of the spotless destinations of mahar, janas, tapas and satya, but My destination [Vaikuṅṭha] is reached by performing devotional service. (15) As arranged by Me, the Supporter, the Soul [the energy] of Time, one rises up from or drowns in the mighty stream of the modes of this world in which one is bound to performing fruitive labor. (16) Whatever the small, the big, the thin and the massive of manifestation, is all brought about by the combination of material nature and its enjoyer [see also B.G. 18: 16]. (17) That what constitutes the cause of something - common matters like things of gold and things of clay - is there in the beginning, during the life as also in the end of that what was produced and is subject to transformation [and is thus illusory as for its form, compare 6.16: 22, 10.87: 15, 11.22: 8]. (18) Something that serves as a previous ingredient of a thing that - as something different - constitutes a change of form of that ingredient, is called the true of something provided it is present from the beginning to the end [compare B.G. 2: 13, 2: 16]. (19) Material nature [prakṛti] the foundation of which is constituted by the causal [transformed] ingredient of the Supreme Person [the puruṣa], together with that what is the agitating agent, viz. Time [kāla], makes up the threefold of the Absolute Truth [Brahman] that I am. (20) For as long as I look after it [or cast My glance], the grand creation will perpetually, for the sake of the variegation of its qualities, generation after generation continue to exist until its dissolution [see also B.G. 3: 24]. (21) When the form of the universe that is pervaded by Me has manifested the planetary variety of its time periods [of creation, maintenance and decay], this variety with its different worlds [losing its synergy] arrives at [a dissolution into] its five composing gross elements [see yugas, manvantaras, and B.G. 11: 13]. (22-27) The mortal frame [at the time of annihilation] will merge with the food, the food with the grains, the grains with the earth and the earth with the fragrance. Fragrance becomes merged with the water, the water with its quality of taste, the taste with the fire and the fire with the form. Form merges with air, air merges with touch and touch merges thereupon with the ether. Ether merges with the subtle object of sound and the senses [of sound etc.] become merged with their sources [the gods of the sun and moon etc.]. The sources, My dear Uddhava, merge with the mind of the ego of goodness, the controller of the sound, that dissolves in the original state of the elements [the ego of slowness]. This all-powerful primal elementary nature then merges with the cosmic intelligence [mahat]. That greater principle dissolves in its own basic qualities and they in their turn merge with their ultimate abode, the unmanifest state of nature that merges with the infallible Time. Time merges with the individuality [the jīva] of the Supreme in command of the illusory potency and that individuality merges with Me, the Supreme Self Unborn [ātmā], who, characterized by creation and annihilation, is perfectly established in Himself and remains alone [see also 3.11: 28, 4.23: 15-18, 11.3: 12-15]. (28) Just as with the darkness when the sun rises in the sky, how can the bewilderment of the dual mind remain in the heart of the one who seriously studies this? (29) This is what I, the Supervisor of the Spiritual and Material world, had to say concerning this sāṅkhya instruction of analysis [see also 3.25 - 3.33] that breaks through the bondage of doubts of the people who both go along with and go against nature.'

Chapter 20 - The Three Modes of Nature and Beyond

(1) The Supreme Lord said: 'Oh best of persons, try to understand what I am about to say concerning the way someone is influenced by a certain mode of My material nature [*]. (2-5) With the basic quality of goodness one finds equanimity, sense control, tolerance, discrimination, penance, truthfulness, compassion, remembrance, contentment, renunciation, freedom from desire, faithfulness, modesty and pleasure within. With the mode of passion there is lust, endeavor, conceit, dissatisfaction, false pride, a desire for blessings, separatism, sense gratification, rashness, love of praise, ridicule, display of valor and hard sanctioning. With the natural quality of ignorance one runs into intolerance, greed, deceitfulness, violence, attention seeking, hypocrisy, listlessness, quarrel, lamentation, delusion, the suffering of depression, sloth, false expectations, fear and indolence. These, one after the other described by Me, constitute the majority of the effects of the modes. Hear now about their combinations [see also B.G. 14]. (6) Oh Uddhava, the notion of 'I am this way' and 'that is a trait of mine' that people have [in relation to these qualities] when they are engaged with their mind, senses, sense objects and life breath, reflects a combination of the modes [see also 11.23: 49, 11.24: 7, 11.24: 13].

(7) In case a person is fixed in his religiosity, economic development and sense gratification, [also] the resultant faith, wealth and enjoyment is an expression of the interaction of the different modes. (8) When a person in family life is of a dedication characterized by sense gratification and thereafter performs his religious duties, a combination of the modes is a fact. (9) From someone's self-control can be deduced that he is endowed with goodness and so on, his lust is indicative of the mode of passion and such, and from his anger etcetera one may conclude that he is caught in ignorance. (10) When someone worships Me with devotion and indifference about the results of his labor, such a person should be understood to be of a practice of goodness, whether he is a man or a woman. (11) When one in the fulfillment of one's duties worships Me hoping for benedictions, such devotion must be understood as being of the nature of passion, and when one does so with violent intentions one is of ignorance [see also B.G. 17: 20-22]. (12) The modes of sattva, tamas and rajas influence the [conditioned] individual but not Me; one is bound to them because they manifest in the mind and lead to attachment to life-forms and sense-objects [see also B.G. 4: 14]. (13) When the mode of goodness - which is pure, luminous and auspicious - predominates over the other two [of passion and ignorance], a person will be blessed with happiness, religiosity, knowledge and other good qualities [see also B.G. 14: 11, 18: 37]. (14) When passion defeats goodness and ignorance one gets attached, wants to make a difference and tends to impermanence, because of which one becomes unhappy by profit minded actions and striving for a good name and wealth [see also B.G. 14: 12, 18: 38]. (15) When ignorance dominates passion and goodness one's discrimination is defeated, one's consciousness is covered, one's initiative is lost and one becomes endowed with bewilderment, complaints, sleeping too much, violence and false hopes [see also B.G. 14: 13, 18: 39]. (16) When one's consciousness clears up and the senses are not distracted, one achieves physical self-confidence and a detached mind; know that to be the goodness of My refuge. (17) When the intelligence is disturbed by too much activity, when one fails to disengage from one's senses, when one is not at ease with one's body and when the mind is unsteady, you should understand that to be the symptoms of passion. (18) Failing in the higher functions of consciousness, getting dull, being unable to focus, not being mindful, not understanding things and being gloomy, you should recognize as the mode of ignorance. (19) When goodness increases the strength of the gods increases, when passion increases the demons grow stronger, and when ignorance increases, Uddhava, the wild men will get on top. (20) Know that one is wakeful in the mode of goodness, that one is sleepy in passion, that one is not aware in the ignorant mode of the living entity and that the fourth [transcendental] state [of consciousness turiya] pervades the three [see also 7.7: 25 and B.G. 6: 16]. (21) In the mode of goodness spiritual [Vedic] persons reach higher and higher, in the mode of ignorance one reaches head first lower and lower [births], and in the mode of passion one is stuck in between [in attachments, see also B.G. 6: 45, 16: 19]. (22) Those who die in goodness go to heaven, those who die in passion go to the human world and those who die in ignorance go to hell. They however who are free from the modes come to Me [see also B.G. 9: 25, 14: 18]. (23) Work dutifully done as a sacrifice unto Me without desiring the fruits is in the mode of goodness, work done with a profit motive is of the mode of passion, and work performed with violence and pressure and such, is of the mode of ignorance [B.G. 17: 20-22]. (24) Spiritual knowledge of detachment is of the mode of goodness, fostering opinions one is of the mode of passion, and a materialistic conviction belongs to the mode of ignorance. Spiritual knowledge focussed on Me [however] is considered to be free from the modes [see also 6.14: 2]. (25) To have one's residence in the forest is of the mode of goodness, to reside in a town is said to be of the mode of passion, to reside in a gambling house is of the mode of ignorance, but My residence is elevated above the modes [see also 7.12: 22, 11.18: 25]. (26) A worker free from attachment is of the mode of goodness, blinded by personal desire one is of the mode of passion, having lost one's memory one speaks of the mode of ignorance [see 11.22: 38-39], [but] the one who has taken shelter of Me is free from the modes. (27) In the mode of goodness one believes in spiritual matters, in the mode of passion one believes in fruitful activities, in the mode of ignorance one is irreligious, but one is transcendental to the modes with faith in My devotional service. (28) Food that is wholesome, pure and attained effortlessly is considered to be of the mode of goodness, [strongly] catering to the senses it is of the mode of passion, and impure food that makes one suffer is of ignorance [see also B.G. 17: 7-10]. (29) Happiness derived from the soul is of the mode of goodness, generated by sense objects it is of passion, happiness derived from delusion and depravity is of the mode of ignorance, but free from the modes happiness is found in Me [see 11.15: 17 & B.G. 5: 21, but also 6: 7].

(30) Material substance, the place, the fruit of action, time, knowledge, activity, the performer, faith, the state of consciousness and the species and destinations of life thus all belong to the three guṇas. (31) Oh best among men, all that exists, being seen, heard or pictured in one's mind, is a composition of the three basic qualities that was established by the unseen [Original] Enjoyer. (32) These forms of existence [and stages of life] of the [repeatedly incarnating] living being, are bound to the operation of the modes. Oh gentle one, the individual soul who, dedicated to Me in bhakti-yoga, conquers these natural qualities that manifest themselves in the mind, qualifies for My transcendental love. (33) They who obtained this human body by which one acquires knowledge and develops wisdom, should therefore be as smart to shake off their attachment to the natural modes and worship Me. (34) A learned man should worship Me free from attachment; attentively having subdued his senses a sage should take to the mode of goodness and conquer the modes of passion and ignorance. (35) With his intelligence pacified he, being connected [in bhakti] without any [other] dependency, should also conquer the mode of goodness. The embodied soul who [thus] freed from the modes gives up the cause of his conditioning, reaches Me. (36) The living entity, who as an individual soul by Me thus was liberated from the basic qualities of nature that nestled in his mind, achieves thus, by dint of the Absolute Truth, complete fulfillment and will neither internally nor externally, any longer wander around.'

Uddhava Gītā

*: The word nature can also be taken literally as the modes in the sense of the seasons and their primary demigods. Kṛṣṇa says that Viṣṇu, who is the original controller above the modes, the best of the gods [10.89: 14-17], is of goodness [11.15: 15], the purest mode [B.G. 14: 6], leading to the godliness of Him [B.G. 14: 14], and that of the seasons He is the season of spring [B.G. 10: 35]. Autumn/Spring is as such His season of balance and of the mode of goodness. The same way the inertia of cold is representative for the mode of ignorance that is ruled by Śiva, and the hyperactivity and heat of the summer is a display of the mode of passion that is ruled by Brahmā.

---

Chapter 21 - The Song of Purūravā

---

(1) The Supreme Lord said: 'Having acquired this human body that is My characteristic, one achieves, being situated in My dharma, Me, the Supreme Soul of Spiritual Happiness situated in the heart. (2) Someone who, fixed in spiritual knowledge, has become free from the cause of material life based on the products of the modes, does not get entangled in their illusory qualities despite of being surrounded by them; although present before his eyes they are insubstantial and nothing but illusion to him. (3) One should never at any time seek the company of materialists devoted to the gratification of their genitals and bellies, for they who follow such people will fall into the darkest pit, like a blind man following another one. (4) The descendant of Ilā [called Aila or

Purūravā, see also 9.14: 15-16], the well-known great emperor, sang the following mighty song when he, bewildered being separated from Urvaśī, in resignation managed to restrain his grief. (5) The moment she abandoned him and left, he like a madman naked and crying ran after her calling out: 'Oh my wife, oh you terrible woman, please stop!' (6) With his mind possessed by Urvaśī he, after years of insignificantly gratifying his lusts, was not satisfied and did not notice the nights coming and going.' (7) Purūravā said: 'Just see how bewildered I got! With my consciousness contaminated by lust I, in the embrace of this goddess, did not notice my life time passing. (8) Captivated by her I had no idea whether the sun was rising or setting and have thus alas, for many years, spent my days. (9) Oh what a pity this total bewilderment of mine because of which the body of this mighty emperor, this crown jewel of kings, became a toy animal for women! (10) When she abandoned me, the mighty controller, together with all of my kingdom as if I were a blade of grass, I ran crying naked like a madman after the woman. (11) Where is now the influence, strength and sovereignty of the person I am? I ran after this woman leaving me, just like an ass being kicked with the hoof for punishment! (12) What is the use of knowledge, austerities, renunciation, the scriptures, or of solitude and silence, for the one whose mind is stolen by women? (13) To hell with the fool I am unaware of what is good for him; I who thought to be a scholar in achieving the position of a lord and controller but who, just like a bullock or ass, was conquered by women! (14) For so many years serving Urvaśī's lips, I, with the lust born from my mind, never got enough of the nectar, just like a fire one can never satisfy with oblations. (15) Who else but the Innerly Satisfied Lord of the Sages, the Supreme Lord Beyond the Senses, can free someone who lost his mind with a courtesan? (16) Out of control with myself being dull-minded, I saw no end to my confusion, even though the goddess [Urvaśī] eloquently gave me advice [see 9.14: 20-22]. (17) What would she have done wrong to a 'seer' like me who, taking a rope for a snake, has no notion of his real nature [his svarūpa]? I am the one out of control with his senses is it not? (18) What does this filthy body have to offer, unclean and full of bad odors; what are those 'pleasing [feminine] qualities' and so on anyway? They constitute an influence rooting in ignorance! (19-20) One can never tell whether this body belongs to one's parents, wife or employer, to [the funeral] fire, the dogs and jackals or to the [indwelling] soul or one's friends. One gets attached to this unholy matter and praises it, in case of a woman, for having such a cute nose, beautiful smile and face, but one heads with it for the lowest destination [of decay]. (21) In what sense would one differ from worms when one enjoys that what is composed of skin, flesh, blood, muscle, fat, marrow and bone, urine, stool and pus? (22) A man understanding what is best for him, should never run after women or associate with men thus engaged, for the sole reason that the mind, united with the senses, reaches for sense objects and thus gets agitated [compare 5.5: 2, 7.12: 9, 9.19: 17, 9.14: 36]. (23) [Because] a thing not heard or seen gives no rise to mental agitation, the mind of someone not engaging his senses calms down and finds peace. (24) When not even wise men can rely on the six enemies [lust, anger, greed, bewilderment, intoxication and envy; the ṣaṭ-varga], then what about persons like me? One therefore should not get sensorily attached to women or to men attached to women [see also yoṣita].'

(25) The Supreme Lord said: 'He, the worshipable lord of gods and men, who thus sang his song [of lamentation], then gave up the world of Urvaśī. Realizing Me, the Supersoul in his heart, he by the transcendental knowledge found peace within himself and ended his illusion. (26) An intelligent person having abandoned bad association therefore should be fixed on devotees, for only by their words he can cut with the deep attachment of his mind. (27) Devotees with their minds fixed on Me do not depend [on lusts] and are, with an equal minded vision, completely peaceful and free from possessiveness, false ego, dualities and greed. (28) Oh most fortunate one, these greatly fortunate souls are constantly discussing My stories that have the power to completely eradicate the sins of anyone choosing for them. (29) They who, faithfully dedicated to Me, hear, chant and respectfully take them [My stories] to heart, will attain My bhakti. (30) What else would there remain [to be accomplished] for a devotee once he has achieved devotional service unto Me, the Absolute Truth of Countless Qualities, comprising the experience of spiritual happiness? (31) Just as cold, fear and darkness will dissipate for the one who resorts to the supreme grace of fire [Agni], similarly dullness, apprehension and ignorance will dissolve for someone who serves the devotees. (32) For those who submerge and again rise in the fearful ocean of material life, the saintly devotees, peaceful in understanding the Absolute, constitute a supreme shelter as good as a life boat for people drowning in the water [compare 11.23: 28 and 11.17: 44]. (33) Just as food is there to grant the living beings their life, just as I exist as the shelter for the distressed and dharma is there as the wealth of the deceased, so my devotees constitute the refuge of those afraid to fall down. (34) The devotees grant you the [divine] eyes while the sun [only] shows the external world after having risen; they are the worshipable ones, one's [true] relatives, they are one's actual self and Me as well [see also e.g. 1.1: 15, 3.5: 47, 3.6: 28, 11.2: 6]. (35) He [Purūravā] who for that reason no longer desired the world of Urvaśī, thus liberated from all attachment, innerly satisfied wandered this earth.

---

Chapter 22 - On Respecting the Form of the Lord

---

(1) Śrī Uddhava said: 'Can You please explain the yoga of rites [kriyā-yoga], the yoga of the service unto You as a deity, oh Master? Who is of that worship, in respect of what form is one of worship and in what manner are You worshiped then, oh Master of the Sātvatas [see also mūrti and 11.3: 48-55]? (2) The sages Nārada, Bhagavān Vyāsa and my preceptor the son of Aṅgirā [Bṛhaspati], repeatedly say that for the welfare of men there is nothing as conducive. (3-4) The words about this that emanated from Your lotus mouth were spoken by the great unborn Lord [Brahmā] unto his sons headed by Bṛgu, as also by the great Lord Śiva speaking to the goddess [Pārvatī, see B.G. 3: 9-10]. This [service to Your deity form] is approved by all classes and spiritual orders of society and is, I think, most beneficial for women and the working class, oh Magnanimous One.

(5) Oh Lotus-eyed Lord, please, oh Controller of All Controllers in the Universe, speak to Your devoted bhakta about this means of liberation from the bondage of karma.'

(6) The Supreme Lord said: 'The number of [karma-kāṇḍa] prescriptions for worshipping deities [see e.g. B.G. 1-6] is endless, Uddhava, let Me in brief explain it nicely one step at a time. (7) One should worship Me as one desires following one of the three kinds of sacrifice according to the Vedas, the explanatory literatures [tantras like the Pañcarātra] or a combination of them. (8) Now hear from Me how a person, who according to the for him specific Vedic precepts [*] achieved the status of a second birth, should worship Me with faith and devotion. (9) He must, connected in bhakti, free from ulterior motives ['honestly'] with the necessary paraphernalia worship Me, his worshipable guru, as being present in a deity, in a sacrificial area, a fire, in the [position of the] sun, in water or in the twice-born heart itself [**]. (10) For purification he should first bathe and brush his teeth and next purify himself with both types of [Vedic and tantric] mantras while applying clay and such [see tilaka, kavaca and 6.8: 3-10]. (11) To be freed from his karma, he perfectly convinced should engage in My ritual worship [pūjā] and thereto perform duties as prescribed in the Vedas [see also 11.14: 35] with worship and such [like expressing the Gāyatrī-mantra] at the three junctures of the day [dawn, noon and sunset].

(12) There are eight types of forms with which one remembers Me: in stone, wood, metal, smearable substances [like clay], being painted, in sand, in jewels and as an image kept in mind. (13) Of the two kinds of individual temple deities that are moved and not moved, the installed deity, oh Uddhava, is for His worship not taken away (udvāsa) or again brought forward (āvāhane). (14) Not being installed one has these options, but when assigned a fixed place the following two possibilities are found: not being of a smearable substance [or being painted or made of wood] He is washed, in all other cases He is cleansed without water. (15) There is the worship of My different deities with excellent paraphernalia, there is the worship of a devotee free from material desire using whatever that is readily available and there is the worship in the heart in a mental respect [by love and meditation only].

(16-17) With a deity [in the temple] customary bathing and decorating is most appreciated, Uddhava, for a holy place that is an exercise of respect in mantras [tattva-vinyāsa] and for fire oblations [of sesame, barley etc.] drenched in ghee are considered best. With the sun that is an exercise of respect [with a sundial, see Sūrya-namaskar] and with water offerings of water and such are most suitable. Offerings presented with faith by a devotee of Mine are most dear to Me, even if it is just a bit of water. (18) And what to say of an offering [by devotees] of foodstuffs, flowers, lamps, fragrances and incense [see also B.G. 9: 26]? An offer [by contrast] that, even if it is very rich, is made by a non-devotee, will not satisfy Me [see also B.G. 16]. (19) Being cleansed he should then be of worship, having collected the necessary items, having arranged the seat with blades [of kuśa grass] pointing to the east and sitting down facing the east or the north, or else directly facing the deity [compare 1.19: 17, 4.24: 10, 8.9: 14-15]. (20) After having assigned mantras to his own body and also having done this to My form, he should clean My deity with his hand and properly prepare the sprinkling vessel and the sacred pot. (21) With the water of the vessel sprinkling the area of the deity, the utensils and his own body, he next should prepare three vessels with water and arrange for the necessary auspicious items as far as available [like flowers, grains, blades of grass, sesame seeds etc., see ***]. (22) With the mantras for the heart [hrdayāya namaḥ], the head [śīrase svāhā] and the tuft of hair [śikhāyai vaṣaṭ] the worshiper should purify the three vessels of water for His feet [pādya], His hands [arghya], and His mouth [ācamana], and do the same with the Gāyatrī. (23) He should meditate on the Original Individuality of all Expansions, the very subtle transcendental form of Mine that, within his body that was fully purified by air and fire, is situated on the lotus of the heart and by perfected souls is experienced in the end vibration of the Praṇava [see also 2.2]. (24) With that [meditated form] by his own realization conceived as pervaded within his body, he, of worship fully being absorbed in thought of Me, should invite Me within the deity - and all that is respected along with it - by touching My limbs with mantras [nyasta] and thereupon honor Me [externally by performing pūjā]. (25-26) After first having imagined My seat, decorated with the nine śaktis and the [deities of] dharma etc. [*4] as an effulgent eight-petaled lotus with saffron filaments in its whorl, he should offer to Me the pādya, arghya and ācamana water and other items of worship to be perfect with the two [of enjoyment and liberation] in respect of both the Vedas and the tantras. (27) One after the other he next must honor My disc-weapon [the Sudarśana cakra], conch [the Pāñcajanya], club [the Kaumodakī] and arrows and bow [the Śarṅga], My [Balarāma items of the] plow and pestle [hala and muṣala], My gem [the Kaustubha], garland [the Vaijayantī] and chest mark curl of white hairs [the Śrīvatsa]. (28) [He also honors] Garuḍa, Nanda, Sunanda, Pracaṇḍa and Caṇḍa, Mahābala, Bala, Kumuda and Kumudekṣaṇa [My carrier bird and eight associates]. (29) Durgā, Vināyaka [Ganeśa], Vyāsa, Viṣvaksena [see 6.8: 29, 9.21: 25-26], the spiritual masters and the demigods - each in their own place in front of the deity - should be worshiped with the sprinkling of water and other rituals [*5]. (30-31) Every day [the deity] should be bathed, as far as the means permit, using different kinds of water scented with sandalwood, uśīra root, camphor, kuṅkuma and aguru. Also hymns should be chanted, such as those from a section of the Vedas known as Svarṇa-gharma, the incantation called Mahāpuruṣa, the Puruṣa-sūkta [from the Ṛg Veda] and songs from the Sāma Veda, like the Rājana and others. (32) My devotee should lovingly decorate Me with clothing, a sacred thread, ornaments, marks of tilaka, garlands and [apply] fragrant oils, the way it is enjoined. (33) The worshiper should with faith present to Me pādya and ācamana water, fragrances and flowers, whole grains, incense, lamps and other items. (34) According to his means he should make offerings of foodstuffs, like candy, sweet rice, ghee, rice flour cake [śaṣkūlī], sweet cakes [āpūpa], sweet rice flour dumplings with coconut [modaka], spicy sweet wheat cake of ghee and milk [saṁyāva], yogurt and vegetable soups. (35) On special days, or else every day, [the deity] should be offered a massage with ointment, a mirror, an eucalyptus stick for cleaning the teeth, a bath, food to be chewed and not to be chewed, as also song and dance. (36) In a sacrificial area set up as prescribed he should, wearing a girdle, using a fire pit and an elevation for sacrificing, by hand build and bring to a blaze a fire that is equally piled up. (37) Spreading [kuśa grass mats] and then sprinkling and ceremonially [anvādhāna] placing wood in the fire according to the rules, he should, having arranged for the ācamana water, sprinkle the items to offer and meditate on Me as residing in the fire. (38-41) Meditating in worship of Me as being brilliant, with a color of molten gold, with My conch, disc, club and lotus, with My four arms and peacefulness; with My garment with the color of the filaments of a lotus, shining helmet, bracelets, belt, the ornaments on My arms, with the Śrīvatsa on My chest, the effulgent Kaustubha and with a flower garland; while throwing pieces of wood soaked in ghee into the fire and in the course of the arghya ritual making the two offerings of sprinkling ghee [in two ways called Āghāras] and [two different] oblations of ghee [called Ājyabhāgas], a learned person should, with root mantras and the [sixteen lines of the] Puruṣa-sūkta hymn, offer the oblations into the fire for Yamarāja and the other demigods called Sviṣṭikṛt in due order using a mantra for each [see also 11.14: 36-42, 11.19: 20-24, 11.21: 15]. (42) Thus having been of worship he should bow to offer obeisances unto My associates and next present offerings chanting the basic mantra for the deity in question, thereby remembering Nārāyaṇa as the Original Self of the Absolute Truth. (43) After having offered ācamana water and giving the remnants of the food to Viṣvaksena, he should present to Me prepared betel nut with fragrant substances for the mouth [see also 11.3: 48-53, 11.25: 28]. (44) He should [next] for some time [see kāla, 11.21: 9] become absorbed in My celebration, by listening himself - and make others listen - to My stories, by acting out My transcendental activities, by dancing, by chanting loudly and by singing along with others [see also e.g. 11.5: 36-37, 11.14: 23-24]. (45) With prayers from the Purāṇas, with large or small prayers from other ancient scriptures, with prayers written by others [see bhajans] and prayers from more common sources, he should prostrate himself, pay his obeisances and say: 'Oh Lord, please show Your mercy [prasīda bhagavan].' (46) Placing his head at My feet with his palms brought together [he may say a prayer like:] 'Oh Lord, please protect this surrendered soul who in this material ocean is afraid of being devoured by death [prapannam pāhi mām īśa, bhītam mṛtyu-grahārṇavat, compare B.G. 11: 19].' (47) Praying thus he should put the remnants granted by Me to his head and do this prayer once more - when the deity respectfully is to be bidden farewell - to give the light [of the deity] a place within the light [of his heart *6].

(48) Whenever one develops faith in Me, in whatever deity form or other manifestation, one should for that form be of worship, since I, the Original Soul of All, am situated within My own form as also in all living beings [see also B.G. 6: 31 and *7]. (49) By thus being of worship with the [ritual] processes of acting in yoga as described in the Vedas and in more specialized texts, a person will, in both this life and the next, by My grace achieve the perfection he desired. (50) In order to properly establish My deity, the devotee should build a strong temple and maintain beautiful flower gardens [that provide flowers] for daily pūjā, festivals and yearly occasions. (51) He who donates land, shops, cities and villages, so as to assure the continuance of the daily worship and the special occasions, will achieve an opulence equal to Mine. (52) Installing a deity one attains the entire earth, building a temple one attains the three worlds, and performing pūjā and likewise services one attains the realm of Brahmā, but when one does all of these three, one will attain a quality [a transcendental integrity] equal to Mine. (53) He who free from ulterior motives worships Me thus, will by bhakti-yoga unite his consciousness in devotion and attain Me [see also 5.5: 14, 11.12: 24 and B.G. 6: 44]. (54) The one who steals [or destroys] the property [and/or the service] delivered to the gods and the brahmins, whether given by himself or by others, is bound to take birth as a stool-eating worm for a hundred million years [compare 10.64: 39]. (55) Both the perpetrator and his accomplice, the one who instigated it and the one who approved it, all will have to share, over and over, the karmic consequences in the life that follows [depending the degree of the damage done].'

*: The paramparā says to this that members of the three higher classes of society all achieve the twice-born status by initiation into the Gāyatrī mantra. Brāhmaṇa boys may according to the tradition after due preparation be initiated at the age of eight, kṣatriya boys when they are eleven and vaiśya boys at the age of twelve.

** : The materialistic devotee - almost any person thus - is of devotion with the help of an image of God in the form of a timetable, the sacrificial ground in the form of the desk in his office, the fire in the stove on which he regularly cooks his meals, the sun with the date on the solar calendar and the clock he is manipulating pragmatically, the water with the daily shower he takes and the dishes he washes, and with the twice-born heart that he in his daily contemplations according to the wisdom as an adult acquired from personal experience and from his teachers. Everyone is thus, more or less engaged in devotional service in the practices of devotion as mentioned here, be it at an unconscious materialist and rather impersonal level (see prākṛta).

***: 'Śrīla Śrīdhara Svāmī gives references from the Vedic literature stating that the water meant for bathing the feet should be combined with millet seeds, dūrvā grass mixed in water, Viṣṇukrānta flowers and other items. The water used for arghya should include the following eight items - fragrant oil, flowers, unbroken barleycorns, husked barleycorns, the tips of kuśa grass, sesame seeds, mustard seeds and dūrvā grass. The water for sipping should include jasmine flowers, ground cloves and kakkola berries' (p.p. 11.27: 21).

*4: The seat of dharma is imagined here as consisting of righteousness, wisdom, detachment and supremacy for its legs, the opposite values for the sides of the seat and the three guṇas for the three planks of the base.

Uddhava Gītā

*5: According to Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī the personalities mentioned here are eternally liberated associates of the Lord who reside in the spiritual sky beyond the material manifestation. Not so much the Ganeśa who in this world, as the son of Lord Śiva, is famous for awarding financial success, and the goddess Durgā, the wife of Lord Śiva, renown as the external, illusory potency of the Supreme Lord. (p.p. 11.27: 29).

*6: Devotees accepting flowers, food or fire from the deity customarily take the offering first to their head as a token of respect.

*7: The paramparā adds here: 'By regulated, faithful worship one gradually understands that the deity is completely non-different from the Supreme Lord Himself. At that stage one, on the strength of deity worship, rises to the second-class platform of devotional service. At this more developed stage one desires to make friendship with other devotees of the Lord, and as one becomes solidly established in the community of Vaiṣṇavas, one completely gives up material life and gradually becomes perfect in Kṛṣṇa consciousness' (p.p. 11.27: 48).

---

Chapter 23 - Jñāna-Yoga or the Denomination and the Real

---

(1) The Supreme Lord said: 'When one understands that the world, this combination of matter and person, is based upon one and the same reality, one should refrain from praising and criticizing someone else's nature and activities. (2) He who praises or criticizes someone else's nature and actions quickly will stray from his [real] interest [of self-realization], because he thus adheres to the falsehood [of the world of opposites]. (3) A person aware of the objective diversity is just [as unaware of the one reality] as an embodied soul whose senses, overcome by sleep, experience the illusory reality [of a dream] or the deathlike state of having lost consciousness. (4) What would be good or what would be bad in this unreal, deceptive material duality that, considered by the mind and put into words, results in a false [insufficient] image of reality [*]. (5) Even though shadows, echoes and mirages constitute mere suggestions, they create motives [in people]; the same way the body and what belongs to it gives rise to material conceptions [identifications] that create fear until the day one dies [for they offer no firm hold]. (6-7) The Master, the Lord, the Soul alone, manifests this universe and Himself, protects all that exists and Himself, and withdraws both the creation and Himself. Apart from the Soul, outside of Him, hence no separate living being can be found, just as no other basis can be found for this, within the Self perceived, threefold splendor of the guṇas, that you must know as the threefold manifestation generated by the illusory energy of māyā [under the influence of Him in the form of Time, see also B.G. 14: 19]. (8) Someone who, perfectly conversant and experienced, is well aware of what I have now described, does not blame or praise [in looking for another cause], and wanders the earth as free as the sun. (9) When one by direct perception, logical deduction, scriptural truth and one's self-realization knows that that what is inessential has a beginning and an end, one should move around in this world free from attachment [see also B.G. 2: 16].'

(10) Śrī Uddhava said: 'Material existence is not the experience of the seer who is a soul of self-realization, nor the experience of the spiritless body that constitutes the seen. Whose experience might it be then, oh Lord? (11) The inexhaustible soul, free from the modes, is pure, self-luminous and uncovered just like a fire, while the material body is like firewood that is without understanding. To which of the two belongs the experience of a material life in this world?'

(12) The Supreme Lord said: 'As long as the soul is attracted to the body, the senses and the life force, material existence will continue to flourish, despite being meaningless to the ignorant. (13) Even though not having a purpose of its own, the course of mundane existence [the 'wheel'] does not cease to exist; one keeps, like [being caught] in a dream, contemplating the objects of the senses and the meaninglessness associated with it [compare 3.27: 4, 4.29: 35 & 73, 11.22: 56, B.G. 2: 14]. (14) But that [dreaming], presenting someone not awakened many undesirable experiences in his sleep, will certainly not confound the one who awakened. (15) Lamentation, elation, fear, anger, greed, confusion, hankering and such, one observes with the birth and death of the false ego [ahankāra] and [is] not [seen] with the soul [that does not take birth or die, see 11.22: 12, 11.23: 50-56, 11.25: 30]. (16) The individual soul [of identification] with his attention directed at the body, the senses, the life force and the mind, assumes, depending the guṇas and the karma, his form within the [great universal] Self. With the lead [the sūtra] of the complete of nature thus very differently denominated [as a dog, ape or human being], he then, controlled by time, moves around in material existence. (17) A sober sage free from desire moving around in this world will, with the sword of transcendental knowledge sharpened by worship, cut with this, without a firm basis, [in false ego] being represented in the many forms of the mind, the speech, the life force and the bodily functions. (18) Spiritual knowledge [jñāna, entails] the discrimination [of spirit and matter and is nourished by], scripture and penance, personal experience, historical accounts and logical inference. [It is based upon] that what is there in the beginning, what stays the same in between and what remains in the end of this [creation], namely the Time and Ultimate Cause [of brahman, the Absolute Truth, see also B.G. 10: 30 & 33, 11: 32 and kāla]. (19) Just like gold alone being present before it is processed, is present when it is processed and is also present in the final product of the processing, I am present in different disguises of [the with the guṇas processing of] this creation. (20) My dearest, this spirit of wisdom [this transcendental intelligence] in its three states [of wakefulness, sleep and unconscious sleep], constitutes, with its manifestation in relation to the three natural basic qualities as the causing [of rajas], the caused [of tamas] and the causal agent [of sattva, compare 11.22: 30], the fourth factor [the 'gold' or turīya] that as an independent variable stands for the single [Absolute] truth of each of them. (21) That what was absent before, is absent afterwards, and is not there [independently] in between, is but a designation, a reference. Whatever that was created and is known by something else, is actually only [a reference to] that something else - that is how I see it. (22) Even though this creation, which appears with the transformations of the mode of passion, does not really exist, it thus shines forth as [a reference to] the Absolute Truth standing in its own light, as the Brahman [the impersonal form of God] of the variety of senses, their objects, the self and the transformations [of the five elements, see also siddhānta]. (23) When one by discriminating this way has achieved clarity about the Absolute of the Spiritual Truth, one must wisely speak against the opposite [of falsely identifying oneself], cut with the doubt regarding the Soul, and in the contentment of one's own spiritual happiness desist from all lusty [unregulated] matters [see B.G. 3: 34]. (24) The body made of earth is not the true self, nor are the senses, their gods or the life air, the external air, water, fire or a mind only interested in matter ['food']; nor is the intelligence the true self, or material consciousness, the I that considers itself the doer, the ether, the earth, material things or the restraint [the universal primeval state of equilibrium]. (25) What would the merit be of someone who, by the meditative control of the senses - which are manifestations of the guṇas -, properly has distinguished My abode [or personal identity]? Or whom would he blame when the senses are agitated? What difference would it make to the sun whether the clouds gather or disperse? (26) Just as the sky itself is not affected by the coming and going qualities of the atmosphere, fire, water and earth, or by the qualities of the seasons [of heat and cold], also the Imperishable Supreme remains free from the influence of sattva, rajas and tamas, the modes at the foundation of the I-concept of material existence [see also 1.3: 36, 3.27: 1, B.G. 7: 13]. (27) One must nevertheless, by firm bhakti-yoga unto Me, ban all the impurity of passion from one's mind, until the contamination by the modes has been eliminated that was produced by the deluding material energy [see B.G. 7: 1 & 14 and **]. (28) The same way a disease that was treated imperfectly time and again returns and gives a man trouble, also a mind not purified of its karmic contamination will torment an inexperienced yogi who is still of all kinds of attachment. (29) Imperfect yogis who are commanded by impediments in the form of the human beings [family members, disciples etc., see e.g. Śrī Śrī Śikṣāṣṭhaka-4] sent to them by the thirty gods [see tridaśa], will, by their perseverance in their previous life, once again [in a new life] engage in the practice of yoga, but never more be entangled in fruitful activities [see also 11.18: 14, B.G. 6: 41-42]. (30) A normal living being affected by the work he performs, his karma, impelled by sometimes this and then again that impulse, remains in that position until the moment he dies. But someone intelligent is, despite being situated in the material position, not that [fickle], because he, with the experience of the happiness he found, gave up his material desire. (31) Someone whose consciousness is fixed in the True Self does not give it a moment's thought whether he is standing, sitting, walking or lying down, urinating, eating food or doing whatever else that manifests from his conditioned nature. (32) When one is intelligent one does not take anything else [but the soul] for essential. Whenever such a one faces the not really [independently] existing matters of the senses, he from his logic denies them their separateness, so that they are like the things of a dream that disappear when one wakes up. (33) The soul is not something one accepts or rejects [that comes and goes], but the ignorance [resulting in a material body] that you in many forms under the influence of karma and guṇa accepted as an inextricable part of yourself, My best one, [ultimately] dissolves again in simply that [spiritual] vision. (34) Just as the rising sun puts an end to the darkness in the human eye, without creating that what exists, also a clever and thorough search for My pure truth puts an end to the darkness of someone's intelligence. (35) This self-luminous, unborn, immeasurable Greatness of Understanding who is aware of everything, is the One Without a Second in whom words find their closure and, by whom impelled, speech and the life airs are moving. (36) Whatever notion of duality one might have of the [Supreme] Soul is nothing but a figment of the mind; for such an idea there is no other ground than one's own [identified] self [compare 7.13: 7]. (37) The explanations [in terms of good and bad, see also 11.21: 16] offered by the so-called scholars of the meaning of this, in names and forms perceivable, duality that unmistakably consists of the five elements, are [completely] in vain [see also 5.6: 11].

(38) The body of a yogi who with a lack of experience tries to engage in the practice of yoga, may be hindered by rising disturbances. In that case the following rule of conduct is prescribed. (39) Some disturbances may be overcome by postures [āsanas] combined with concentration exercises [dhāranā], penance [tapas, see ***], mantras and medicinal herbs. (40) Certain inauspicious matters one can overcome step by step by constantly thinking of Me [Viṣṇu-smarana], by [loudly or silently] honoring My names and such [japa, saṅkīrtana], and by following in the footsteps of the masters of yoga [see also B.G. 6: 25]. (41) Some [yogis] keep their bodies under control and make them fit by focussing on health, employing different methods and exercises for the sake of material perfection [siddhis]. (42) It goes without saying that good health should not be worshiped when such an endeavor is useless [when one is very old e.g.], for in matters of the body one is subject to decay, just like a fruit on a tree [see also 11.15: 33]. (43) Although the material body of someone regularly practicing yoga will attain fitness, being intelligent My devotee does not put faith in such yoga and will [eventually] give it up [*4]. (44) The yogi who, free from desires, takes to My shelter and practices this process of yoga, experiences the inner happiness [of the soul] and accepts no defeat by disturbances.'

*: Contrary to popular notions that the medium would be the message, here is stated clearly that the medium is not the message. The words and the ideas, and also the so-called fixed form of things, are all false relative to the original truth, the message, the essence. That what is expressed is the essence, not the expression itself. So the one living being of the person and the living material nature with her Time as the masculine aspect, is the essence and all ideas, fixed things of it and words about it are actually false. Thus we have the paradox of the in itself false expression in words and ideas, this sentence before you as a reader e.g., of that what is true on itself as the wholeness of life. So there are idols of Kṛṣṇa being worshiped with the strict warning not to consider them as something material. Thus praise and criticism, good and bad, are dual notions missing the point of what is objectively the value free reality of brahman, the Absolute Truth of the reality free from illusion that is equally present both outside and inside. Or as one puts it these days: science is value-free.

** : The purport of this is that, even though material nature as His gigantic virāṭ-rūpa form is nondifferent from the Supreme Lord (as elaborately described in this and other chapters), one who has yet to conquer material desire must not artificially seek solace in material things, declaring them to be nondifferent from the Lord [see p.p. 11.28: 27].

***: Concerning penance the beginner is reminded of the fact that voluntary penance, voluntary suffering, is better than penance enforced from the outside in the form of a disease, legal prosecution, shortage, calamities etc. Like the Jews in Exodus would be ready to leave Egypt, one should be ready for the coming of the Lord [see also 11.17: 42 and B.G. 2: 40, 12: 16].

*4: Here one is reminded of the fact that characters like Rāvaṇa and Hiraṇyakaśipu also practiced yoga and attained fitness; attaining perfections that way can also be something demoniac and is thus not the object of belief as stated here. Attaining the Lord is rather the motive for the yogi. Control, health and order is something nice to achieve, but without the Lord it is just as well something demoniac.

---

Chapter 24 - Bhakti-Yoga: the Most Auspicious Way to Conquer Death

---

(1) Śrī Uddhava said: 'This process of yoga is, I think, most difficult to execute for someone not spiritual. Please, oh Acyuta, tell me in simple terms how a person may easily succeed [see also B.G. 6: 33-34]. (2) Generally, oh Lotus-eyed One, [beginning] yoga practitioners get frustrated trying to unite the mind and grow weary of subduing their thoughts being unable to find absorption. (3) For that reason, oh Lotus-eyed Lord of the Universe, the swanlike [devotees] delight in taking to the shelter of Your lotus feet that are the source of all ecstasy, while they who take pride in the results of their yoga, do not [take shelter] and are defeated by Your material energy. (4) It comes as no surprise Acyuta, that You as a friend to all servants with no other shelter, are joined in intimacy with them [are commanded by them], You who [as Rāma] were affectionate with the animal-like [Vānaras] while the edges of Your footstool were covered by the effulgent helmets of the great controllers [like Brahmā]. (5) Knowing the benefit You offer, oh Supreme Soul, Bestower of All Perfections and dearest Lord to those seeking shelter, who would reject You or ever be devoted to anything else and forget [about You in exchange] for some opulence? What would not be granted to those serving the dust of Your feet [see also 10.44: 15, 10.47: 46]? (6) The scholars - despite all their work - would not even with a lifetime as long as Brahmā's be capable of expressing the gratitude [we owe You], oh Lord. For You, in order to remind us of the greater [spiritual] joy of dispelling the sadness of being embodied, show us Your path in two ways: in the form of that what from the caitya authority [of the Supersoul] is mentally conceived within and that what from the outside is conceived on the authority of the ācārya [the paramparā-guru of the tradition].'

(7) Śrī Śuka said: 'Thus questioned by Uddhava who in his heart was most attached to Him, the Lord of all Lords spoke lovingly with an attractive smile, He who - with the universe as His plaything - by His energies assumed His three [principal] forms [the guṇa-avatāras].' (8) The Supreme Lord said: 'I shall explain to you My most auspicious dharma by means of which, with faith executed, a mortal being may defeat unconquerable death. (9) He whose mind is attracted to My devotional service and has offered his heart and intelligence unto Me, should remember to perform, step by step, all his prescribed duties for My sake. (10) One should take shelter of the holy places frequented by My saintly devotees and [follow the example of] the conduct of My devotees among the demigods, humans and demons. (11) Either alone or in association one should with respect for the position of the moon [e.g.], at special occasions and at festivals, engage in singing and dancing and so on, with royal opulence [and generous contributions]. (12) With a pure heart one should see Me, the Supreme Soul free as the sky, as being present within and without oneself and all living beings [see also B.G. 13: 16 and 1.7: 10]. (13-14) Oh brightest spirit, when one with My love thus is of respect for all living beings, one with such an approach has taken shelter of the highest possible knowledge, the absolute unity of spirit. This way regarding the brahmin and the outcast, the thief and the man faithful to the brahminical culture, the sun and the spark, the gentle one and the cruel one equally, one is considered a wise person [see B.G. 5: 18]. (15) Of the person who constantly meditates on My presence in all men, quickly the rivalry, envy, disdain and false ego will disappear. (16) Ignoring the laughter of one's friends and without being embarrassed about outer appearances, one should [factually] throw oneself like a rod to the ground and offer one's obeisances to [all,] even [to] dogs, outcasts, cows and asses [see also Śrī Śrī Śikṣāṣṭhaka-3]. (17) With the functions of what one says, thinks and does, one this way will have to be of worship as long as one has not developed the vision of Me being present in all living beings [see also tridaṇḍa]. (18) For the one who by knowledge and realization sees the Supreme Soul everywhere, everything is based upon the Absolute Truth. Thus free from doubt he desists [from activities so as to unite within]. (19) I consider this - with the functions of one's mind, words and actions seeing Me within all living beings - the most appropriate of all processes. (20) My dear, because this by Me perfectly established method is free from the modes and has no ulterior motives, there is, when one thus tries to be of service unto Me, Uddhava, not even the slightest loss [see also B.G. 2: 40]. (21) Oh best among the pious souls, when one is capable of performing one's duty free from ulterior motives for the sake of Me, the One Supreme, [the emotions] of that endeavor like fear and such, will be futile [see also B.G. 18: 6]. (22) This in one's life, by means of [desisting from] the deceptive and mortal, achieving of Me, the One Immortal, constitutes the cleverness of the clever and the intelligence of the intelligent.

(23) This survey, I thus both in brief and in detail explained to you, constitutes the complete science of the Absolute Truth, that even for the demigods is difficult to access. (24) With clear, logical arguments I repeatedly explained to you the spiritual knowledge; properly understood this will put an end to the doubts a person may have, and liberate him. (25) He who concentrates on this question of yours as also on My clear reply, will attain the eternal secret of the Vedas, the Supreme, Absolute Truth. (26) I shall give Myself to that person who, without reservation, passes on to devotees this traditional instruction of Mine, this knowledge of the Absolute Truth. (27) He who repeats [for others] this Supreme [Knowledge] that is so sanctifying and clear, reveals My presence with the lamp of knowledge and will find purification day after day. (28) The person who attentively and with faith regularly listens to this and is of transcendental devotional service unto Me [is a bhakta], will not get entangled in karmic activities [see also B.G. 3: 9]. (29) Uddhava, oh friend, do you have a clear understanding of the spiritual now and has this lamentation and illusion that arose in your mind been removed [see 11.6: 42-49 and also B.G. 18: 72]? (30) Do not share this with a hypocrite, an atheist or a cheat, nor with someone not willing to listen, a non-devotee or an obstinate person [compare to B.G. 18: 67]. (31) Share it with a person free from these bad qualities, someone virtuous and pure, kindly disposed and dedicated to the welfare of the brahmins, as also with laborers and women if they are of devotion [compare B.G. 9: 32]. (32) For the inquisitive one fully understanding this, there is nothing further to know; once one has drunk the nectar of this palatable beverage, nothing will remain. (33) Everything that people of success with the four goals of life [catuḥ-vidhaḥ] may find in knowledge, in fruitful labor, in mystical yoga, in ordinary activities or in political ruling, you can equally find in Me, My best one [see also B.G. 18: 66]. (34) When a mortal surrenders himself to Me and forsakes all his self-interested labor in his desire of service, he at that time attains freedom from birth and death and qualifies for sharing in My nature.'

(35) Śrī Śuka said: 'After he had heard the words of Uttamaśloka and thus was shown the path of yoga, Uddhava with folded hands said nothing because his throat was choked up with love and his eyes were brimming with tears. (36) Checking himself to steady his mind that was overwhelmed by love, oh King, he felt most grateful. With folded hands he touched the lotus feet of the Hero of the Yadus with his head and addressed Him. (37) Śrī Uddhava said: 'The great darkness of the delusion I embraced, oh Unborn Primeval Person, was dispelled by Your presence. What cold, darkness and fear would have power over someone who approached the sun? (38) You who are so merciful in Your goodness offered to me, Your servant, in return the torchlight consisting of Your wisdom. Whoever filled with gratitude can abandon the basis of Your feet and look for another shelter? (39) The because of Your māyā firmly binding rope of my affection for the Dāśārhas, Vṛṣṇis, Andhakas and Sātvatas, cast by You for the production of offspring, was severed by the sword of the correct knowledge about the soul. (40) Let me offer my obeisances unto You, oh Greatest Yogi, please tell me how I as a surrendered soul can be steadfast in the attraction of Your lotus feet.'

(41-44) The Supreme Lord said: 'Please Uddhava, accept My advice to head for My hermitage called Badārika. At the riverbanks there be purified by the touching of and bathing in the water emanating from My feet [see 5.17]. Be, with your eyes fixed upon the Alakanandā [a tributary of the Ganges] cleansed of all impurities, dress yourself in bark, My dear, eat from the forest and be happy freed from desire. Exercise with your intelligence, spiritual knowledge and wisdom, forbearance with all dualities, keep saintly to your principles, restrict your senses and live in peace and absorption. Believe in and meditate on that what you from Me have learned to discriminate. When you with your words and mind absorbed in Me thus devote yourself to My dharma, you will, with that discipline reaching beyond the three destinations [the three worlds], thereupon reach Me.'

(45) Śrī Śuka said: 'After thus having been addressed by the Lord of Understanding, Uddhava circumambulated Him keeping Him to the right, and even though he at the time of his departure was free from the influence of material opposites, he with a breaking heart with his head bowed down flooded His feet with his teardrops. (46) Finding it most difficult to let go of His love, he because of the departure was overwhelmed by emotions and could not abandon Him. Filled with pain he again and again offered his obeisances and placed the slippers of his Maintainer on his head. Then he departed [*]. (47) The great devotee then installed Him permanently in his heart and went to the illustrious place of pilgrimage [which as such is also called Viśālā] the One Friend in the Universe had mentioned. There properly executing his austerities, he attained the Lord's destination [Vaikuṅṭha]. (48) Anyone who with honest belief is full of attention for [listens to, speaks about and practices] this ocean of ecstasy, this nectarean sea of spiritual knowledge [of bhakti-yoga] that by Kṛṣṇa, He whose feet are served by the masters of Yoga, was collected for His devotee, will liberate [himself and therewith] the entire world. (49) I am bowed down to the greatest and first of all beings, the personality named Kṛṣṇa, who makes His many devotees drink the nectar from the [milk] ocean that is de essence of the Vedas, the essence of the spiritual knowledge and wisdom that He, as the author of the Vedas, like a bee delivered in order to take away the fear of material existence.'

*: The paramparā adds here: 'According to the Śrīmad Bhāgavatam [3.4: 5], while Uddhava was enroute to Badarikāśrama he heard about the Lord's journey to Prabhāsa. Turning back and following Lord Kṛṣṇa from behind, he saw the Lord alone just after the withdrawal of the Yadu dynasty. After being again mercifully instructed by the Personality of Godhead (along with Maitreya, who had just arrived), Uddhava felt his knowledge of the truth reawaken, and then, by the order of the Lord, he went on his way.'

Uddhava Gītā

---

- Glossary -

---

A

- abhyāsa: endurance, a regular yoga practice, discipline.
- Aadhar: basis, foundation, name of the translator Anand Aadhar meaning 'basic happiness'.
- ācamana: ritual purification by sprinkling parts of the body with water while expressing mantras.
- ācārya: spiritual teacher who acts according to precept and example.
- adharmā: injustice, unrighteousness, immorality, impiety, unreasonableness, godlessness, guilt, neglect of duty, the counterpart of dharma (see there).
- acintya-bhedābheda-tattva: the inconceivable reality of oneness in diversity; the supreme enjoyer and the controlled living beings are simultaneously one and different (see Caitanya).
- ādhibhautika: hindrances, suffering in material existence caused by other living beings, see kleśas.
- ādhidāivika: hindrances, suffering in material existence caused by God, the gods or nature, see kleśas.
- ādhyātmika: hindrances, suffering in material existence caused by oneself, by one's own actions, see kleśas.
- Aditi: the mother of the gods.
- advaita: free from duality, the connectedness or unity of the cause and effect of existence; a school of philosophy. There are three types of advaita: conceptual, according to activities and according to common interest (see further 7.15: 53-56).
- Agni: the fire god.
- ahaṅkāra: false ego, identification with the material body.
- anarthas: the six vices or non-virtues of lust, anger, greed, jealousy, pride and illusion that obstruct a spiritual life.
- Ananta: the transcendental primeval snake that Viṣṇu rests upon.

- anuloma: characteristic of a person within the varṇāśrama-system in which the father is of a higher class than the mother (see also pratiloma).
- Arjuna: the prince for whom Kṛṣṇa spoke the Bhagavad Gītā.
- Aryamā: the leader of the ancestors.
- Asita: a great sage.
- āśrama: 1. hermitage or abode of ascetics; 2. a phase of life a human being passes on the spiritual path within the varṇāśrama-system (see there).
- aśvattha: (ficus religiosa) species of fig tree or bodhi tree also called pippala that is considered most sacred.
- Aśvins, Aśvinī-kumāras: a pair of twin gods, the gods ruling the objects of sense perception; the protectors of health.
- asura: demon, unenlightened soul.
- ātma: soul, self, mind, body, heart (see also Self).
- AUM: omkāra and also Om the so-called Prāṇava (see there), the primeval meditation sound so many mantras often begin with.
- avadhūta: self-realized person, vagrant, total forsaker, also derelict, fool or madman.
- avatāra: an appearance, a manifestation of the Original Person (the so-called ādi puruṣa who is Kṛṣṇa) or a descent of the Fortunate One (Bhagavān) on earth in one of His transcendental forms. There are different types of avatāras like channa, līlā, Viṣṇu, guṇa and puruṣa avātaras (see there). Such an appearance is by the Vaiṣṇava not considered as being material and temporary even though it appears and disappears again.

B

- Balarāma: first expansion and eternal companion of Kṛṣṇa, in His pastime on earth acting as His elder brother.
- Bali: a demoniac ruler who became a devotee of Viṣṇu.
- Bāṇa: a thousand-armed enemy of Kṛṣṇa.
- bhaga: the so-called opulences of the Lord: knowledge, power, beauty, fame, riches and detachment.

- Bhagavad Gītā: part of the Mahābhārata, a poetic exposition of 700 verses, in which Kṛṣṇa educates His friend Arjuna about God, the soul, nature, karma and time.
- bhajan: devotional song with repetitions of singing first and singing the same thereafter.
- bhagavān: Kṛṣṇa as the Fortunate One, the Lord of the Opulences, the Supreme Lord, Bhagavān, the Supreme Personality of Godhead or also the mightiest and most important person. Next to Kṛṣṇa also e.g. the wise seer Nārada and the writer of this book Vyāsadeva, are called bhagavān.
- bhāgavata: (saintly, godly, follower of Viṣṇu) that what relates to or originates from Viṣṇu or Kṛṣṇa; the term applies to the book, the Lord as also His pure devotee.
- bhāgavata dharma: devotional service unto the Lord, emancipation in eight stages beginning with listening and singing.
- Bhāgavatam: see Śrīmad Bhāgavatam.
- Bhāgavata Purāṇa: the Bhāgavatam, 'the story of the Fortunate One', collection of classical stories in twelve books (see Canto) about Viṣṇu and especially Kṛṣṇa; the most illustrious complement of the Vedas (the so-called 'fifth Veda'), in which the teachings of the Bhagavad Gītā are continued at a higher level, that is to say concerning a more intimate and deeper relationship with the Fortunate One (zie ook bhagavān).
- bhakta: devoted servant of the Lord.
- bhakti: loving devotion, devotional service.
- bhakti-yoga: the uniting of consciousness through performing devotional service.
- Bhṛgu: a great sage, the head of the (seven or ten greatest) sages in the universe. Sages are sometimes called 'sons of Bhṛgu'.
- Brahmā: the Lord of Creation and leader of the demigods, the creator. One of the three guṇa-avatāras (see there).
- brahmaṇa: 1. member of the highest of the four societal classes - see varṇa; 2. someone who realizes Brahman.
- brahmacārī: celibate student.
- brahmacarya: celibate discipleship, practice of chastity.
- Brahman: first stage of self-realization; the Absolute Truth; the all-pervading seemingly impersonal aspect of God. It is distinguished in parā- and apara brahman relating to respectively the unseen and visible portion of creation. The brahman is prakṛti, puruṣa and kāla as one complete whole.

- brāhmaṇa: a brahmin.
- Bṛhaspati: leading priest or the spiritual teacher of the demigods.

C

- Caitanya Mahāprabhu (1486-1534): channa avatāra of Viṣṇu, Kṛṣṇa, who returned to earth as a bhakta in the feminine amorous mood of intense separation from Himself. Reformer and founder of the modern bhakti movement of Vaiṣṇavism. He cleared the way for the emotionality of the devotee in the form of so-called rasas or devotional moods as modeled by the gopīs in their love for Kṛṣṇa (like anger, amazement, horror, neutrality, love, parental care etc.).
- Canto: derivative of kāṇḍa, division or part, section, name for the twelve books the Bhāgavatam consists of.
- cakra: revolving energy centre of the subtle body; wheel of time; natural cyclic order of time; disc weapon of Kṛṣṇa.
- Cāraṇa: singer of heaven.
- catur-vyūha: the four fundamental appearances of the Lord as the Lord of the soul, the ego, the mind and the intelligence.
- catuḥ-vidhaḥ: the four goals of the human being (see puruṣārtas).
- channa-avatāra: a covered, not for everyone to recognize appearance of the Lord in Kali-yuga (see Caitanya Mahāprabhu).

D

- Dakṣa: a mighty son of Brahmā, one of the original progenitors of mankind.
- darśana: vision, point of view, philosophy (see also ṣaḍ-darśana).
- deva: radiating one, god, demigod.
- Devala: a great sage.
- devī: radiating one, goddess.
- dhāraṇā: concentration in yoga, sixth limb of the eightfold yoga (see Patañjali).

- dharma: religion, duty, righteousness, nature, ones own nature, ritualism (see also mārga).
- Diti: mother of the demigods.
- divyam śrotam: divine hearing, a yoga siddhi, the hearing of and listening to ethereal sounds, a special gift or sixth sense.
- Durgā: the Cosmic Mother.
- Dvāpara-yuga: the Vedic era of the great kings (see also Kali)
- Dvārakā: ('many gates') Kṛṣṇa's town in the ocean.
- Dvaipāyana Vyāsa: also called Vyāsadeva, the author of the present book and father of the speaker Śukadeva.
- dvija: a 'twice-born soul'; a member of the three higher classes (see varṇa) who is spiritually initiated (see saṁskāra).

E

- ego: I-awareness, identification of the soul with its physical covering, also called false in that context (ahaṅkāra).

G

- Gandharva: singer of heaven.
- Ganeśa: the elephant god, the one who clears away the stumbling blocks on the spiritual path.
- Garuḍa: Viṣṇu's eagle, standing for the authority of the scriptural truth.
- gāyatrī: 1. metre; 2. mantra for realizing the Supreme Brahman.
- ghī: butter oil, clarified butter the Vaiṣṇavas use for preparing their food.
- gītā: 'that what is sung', a sermon, a song or poem, religious teaching (Gītā means: the song of).
- gopī: cowherd girl from Vraja, the village where Kṛṣṇa grew up - these girls in their ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa are the greatest of all devotees and thus also a model for the devotees.

- gosvāmī: 'master of the senses', spiritual teacher, traveling renunciate in the line of Caitanya Mahāprabhu.
- Govinda: Kṛṣṇa as the friend of the cows.
- gṛhastha: householder; second phase of life within the varṇāśrama-system, in which one according to the scripture maintains a family with a household.
- Guhyaka: servant of Kuvera.
- guṇas: qualities or modes of material nature, knowing tamas - ignorance, inertia and slowness; rajas - passion, movement; sattva - goodness, light.
- guṇa-avatāras: the three incarnations of the Fortunate One representing and ruling the three modes of physical nature. Brahmā rules passion, Viṣṇu rules the goodness and Śiva is the ruler of ignorance.

H

- Hari: a name of Viṣṇu, the Lord, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa.
- Haṁsa: 'swan', name of an avatāra of Viṣṇu, name of the people in Satya-yuga.
- Hanumān: the ape-like servant of the avatāra Rāma (see there).

I

- Indra: the lord, the king of heaven, the king of the demigods, ruler of the atmosphere, the sky and the rain; he defeats the demons with his thunderbolt.
- indriyas: the so-called ten senses; five of perception, the so-called jñānendriyas (see there) and five of action, the so-called karmendriyas (see there).
- Īśvara: master, Lord, prince, king, God; Kṛṣṇa is Yogīśvara, the Lord of Yoga.

J

- Jāmbavān: a bear-like devotee of the avatāra Rāma (see there).
- janas: janaloka, the planet of the humans, the fifth of the heavenly worlds.

- japa: silent, whispering or loud recitation of mantras with the help of prayer beads, a so-called japa mālā (see also Mahāmantra).
- Jaṭāyu: a vulture-like devotee of the avatāra Rāma (see there).
- jāti-smara: a siddhi, the mystical power of remembering previous births.
- jīvā: living being, the individual soul also named jīvā-ātmā.
- jñāna: spiritual knowledge.
- jñāna-yoga: uniting one's consciousness on the path of spiritual knowledge leading to liberation in Brahman.
- jñānī: practitioner of jñāna-yoga.
- jñānendriyas: the senses of perception of touch, sight, taste, hearing and smell.

K

- kaivalya: complete detachment, emancipation, beatitude, the purest experience, the fullness of the blissful state free from the qualities of material nature (guṇa). Term for the enlightened state of eternal happiness.
- kāla: time. Kṛṣṇa says three times in the Gītā that He is the time (the Time) in person, the father, the destroyer.
- kālakūṭa: poison, the poison that Lord Śiva drank when the ocean of milk was churned.
- kalpa: day of Brahmā, an endless cosmic period.
- Kali-yuga: the age of quarrel, also called the iron age, the era that began after the departure of Kṛṣṇa to His heavenly abode.
- Kapila: avatāra of Viṣṇu as the teacher of śaṅkhya.
- karma: consequence of one's activities, result-minded labor, profit-minded labor, fruitive labor, binding the soul to saṁsāra (see there). There are three kinds: karma, akarma - voluntarism and/or devotional service and vikarma - criminal, unlawful activities.
- karma-kāṇḍa: department of the Vedas dealing with the question of how the materially entangled person can curb his profit-minded labor for the sake of the devotional activity that purifies him step by step; the performance of sacrificial ceremonies for the sake of wealth and prosperity.

- karma-yoga: yoga by the performance of disinterested, altruistic work, voluntary labor, sacrificial ceremonies according to the karma-kāṇḍa method (see there).
- karmendriyas: the working senses of the mouth (speech), the hands, the legs, the sexual organs and the organs of secretion.
- Keśava: Kṛṣṇa, the One with the beautiful curling hair.
- Khaṭvāṅga: a Vedic king born from the famous king Viśvasaha. He killed many demons and became an emperor who in loving service renounced his worldly interests and attained the spiritual abode of Vāsudeva (zie 9.9: 41-49). He was an ancestor of Rāma.
- Kiṁdeva: kind of demigod.
- Kinnara: humanlike heavenly creature.
- kleśas: three forms of hindrances, suffering in material existence as caused by other living beings, because of nature or because of the gods and suffering because of one's own activities, respectively ādhibhautika, ādhidaivika, ādhyātmika.
- kośa: 'layer' 'cover', seven layers, dimensions or departments in the body of a person or the universe that must be considered the body of God.
- Kṛṣṇa: a Viṣṇu-avatāra, the Supreme Personality of Godhead descending on earth in Vraja as the son of a cowherd king, defeating countless demons, liberating many devotees and restored the eternal teaching by speaking de Bhagavad Gītā before Arjuna and this Uddhava Gītā for Uddhava.
- Kṛṣṇa-consciousness: natural consciousness (nature is His 'grand form'), spiritual state attained by meditation upon Lord Kṛṣṇa; the actual perfection of yoga called Kṛṣṇa-consciousness by the Vaiṣṇavas who defend the Bhāgavatam in the West; the so-called fourth state of consciousness called turiya (see there and also Mahāmantra).
- kṣatriya: warrior, ruler.
- Kumāras: 'child sages', the four ascetic sons of Brahmā.
- Kurus: the dynasty of Arjuna who therein together with his brothers came into conflict with their nephews.
- kuśa: holy grass used for meditations.

L

- Lakṣmī: the goddess of fortune, consort of Nārāyaṇa.
- modes: natural qualities, three guṇas (see there).
- liṅga: the subtle body; that part of one's being you take with you to a next life, it encompasses the person in his material identifications and mind.
- līlā-avatāras: countless incarnations of Viṣṇu who in every age appears in the material world for the sake of His pastimes as the (līlā) Supreme Personality of Godhead.
- loka: planet, world, place, destination.

M

- Mādhava: scion of Madhu, Kṛṣṇa as the sweet spring.
- Madhusūdana: Kṛṣṇa, killer of Madhu, the demon of ignorance.
- Mahāmantra: the 'great mantra' the Vaiṣṇava uses to meditate upon Lord Viṣṇu, the 'Maintainer' in His appearances of Kṛṣṇa and Rāma: 'Hare Kṛṣṇa Hare Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa Kṛṣṇa, Hare Hare; Hare Rāma Hare Rāma, Rāma Rāma, Hare Hare.' Hare means as much as 'of the Lord' or 'the energy of' or 'the love of'. The mantra is used both individually and in association, silently and aloud, and is therefore called the great mantra.
- Mahāprabhu: Lord Caitanya, channa-avatāra of Kṛṣṇa who in 1486 in Navadvīpa, West Bengalen appeared as His own bhakta and therewith reformed Vaiṣṇavism.
- mahat(-tattva): 'the great principle', cosmic intelligence, intellect, the from Viṣṇu emanating material primal principle, in which the universes are manifested.
- maharloka: the higher world, the greater world of the Vedic verses, the world of the seers one attains after long penances.
- mantra: meditation formula, most often consisting of holy names, by which one detaches oneself from māyā and ahaṅkāra (see there) and binds oneself to the Supreme Personality or to one of His aspects (see also Mahāmantra, neti neti, gāyatrī and AUM).
- Manu: son of Brahmā, founding father of mankind.
- manvantara: period of Manu; there are fourteen of them in a kalpa (see there).

- mārga: path of dharma, there are two of them: the path of regulated sense gratification called pravṛtti (see there) and the path of nivṛtti (see there) of activities in renunciation, of contemplation. This book deals especially with the latter path.
- Mathurā: city, close to present day Delhi, in which Kṛṣṇa appeared on earth.
- Maya: the architect of the gods.
- māyā: (not-this, what is not) the (material) illusion, the bewildering effect of material nature or the material energy, to be separated from Kṛṣṇa.
- māyāvādi: 'person following illusion', said especially about followers of impersonal and nihilistic views.
- Meru: also called Sumeru, the central cosmic mountain.
- mleccha: a meat eater, a barbarian, a foreigner, a sinner.
- Mukunda: Kṛṣṇa, the redeemer, the liberator.
- mukti: liberation.
- mūrti: (altar) idol, statue.

N

- Nāga: mystical snake, great personality.
- Nāhuṣa: also called Yayāti, founding father of the Yadu dynasty, Kṛṣṇa's family line.
- Nārada: protector of the devotees, freely roaming sage.
- Nārāyaṇa: the Supreme Lord in the spiritual world, expansion of Kṛṣṇa.
- nava mūrti: the nine appearances of the Lord worshiped by the devotees: the so-called catur-vyūha (Vāsudeva, Saṅkarṣaṇa, Pradyumna, Aniruddha), Nārāyaṇa, Varāha, Nṛsimha, Hayagrīva and Vāmana (sometimes also Indra en Brahmā are mentioned in stead of the one last mentioned).
- neti-neti: (neither this, nor that) meditation mantra leading the mind away from the material duality.
- nirukta: the process and practice of the explicit use of the names of the Lord in loudly expressing, explaining and defining the mantras and verses as laid down, in order to arrive thus at knowledge of the Vedas.
- nirvāna: the beatitude, ultimate emancipation, freedom from material duties or a material life, heaven, existence after death.

- nitya-baddha: state of eternal bondage as long as the pravṛtti path is followed (see there).
- nivṛtti: contemplative life as opposed to a life of labor (pravṛtti).
- niyama: second limb of the eightfold yoga consisting of different observances: śauca - cleanliness, santoṣa - contentment, tapah - renunciation, svādhyāya - self-study, īśvaraprāṇidhāna - surrender to the Lord (see Patañjali).

O

- Omkāra: see AUM.

P

- pañca-bhāga: de five claimants of the sacrifices; the five 'household gods': the gods, the ancestors, de seers, the human beings and the lower creatures.
- Paramātmā: also called the Supersoul, the Soul of the soul, emanation of Kṛṣṇa in the heart of every living being, the Self, different from the smaller self, the soul.
- paramparā: 'one after the other', the disciplic succession, the culture of handing down the tradition.
- Patañjali: author of the Yoga-sūtras, a treatise about the basic principles of yoga in which he explains the eightfold (aṣṭaṅga) system of yama - austerities, niyama - observances, āsana - postures, prāṇāyāma - breath control, pratyāhāra - turning inward, dhāraṇā - concentration, dhyāna - meditation and samādhi - absorption.
- Piṅgalā: prostitute who became a servant of the Supreme Personality.
- Prahlāda: pure devotee of the Supreme Personality born from a demoniac father, a classical example for the devotees.
- prakṛti: material nature.
- pratiloma: property of a person within the varṇāśrama system in which the father is of a lower class than the mother (see also anuloma).
- pradhāna: ('the thread') primordial, undifferentiated state of matter, primeval ether, non-manifested matter, element preceding all other elements.

- prāṇa: life breath, vital breath.
- Praṇava: the primeval sound AUM, also called omkāra, basic mantra, the sound incarnation of the Lord upon which one according to Kṛṣṇa in 9: 35 should meditate three times a day by repeating it ten times (in the lotus posture).
- prāṇāyāma: controlling, following the breath as a meditation technique for turning inward, fourth limb of the eightfold yoga (see Patañjali).
- prasāda(m): mercy, name for offered food (for mantras see bhagavata.org).
- pravṛtti: a life of labor as opposed to a life of contemplation (nivṛtti).
- pūjā: worship; honoring the idol on the altar with the necessary paraphernalia, at home or in the temple.
- purāṇa: supplement to the Veda.
- Purūravā: descendent of Ilā named Aila, a well-known great emperor; founder of the dynasty of the Yadus and Kurus, the family names of Kṛṣṇa, Uddhava and Arjuna. Was married to Urvaśi (see there).
- puruṣa: person, de original primordial person: 1. God; 2. the soul.
- puruṣārtas: four civil virtues concerning the regulation of lust (kāma), income (artha), religion (dharma) and liberation (mokṣa).
- puruṣa-avatāras: three forms of Viṣṇu standing for His cosmic or causal, His universal and His local aspect of the ether that He is.

R

- rajas: one of the guṇas (see there).
- rākṣasa: demon, wild man.
- Ramā: Lakṣmī the consort of Viṣṇu (see there).
- Rāma: another Viṣṇu-avatāra also called Rāmacandra, a Vedic ruler, a king who together with the ape god Hanumān and his ape hordes and His eternal companion His brother Lakṣmāṇa defeated the demon Rāvaṇa to free His wife Sītā who was kidnapped by the demon.
- Rudra: aspect of Śiva.
- ṛṣi: seer.

S

- sādhu: saintly devotee, renouncer.
- ṣaḍ-darśana: the six points of view of philosophical perspectives of Indian philosophy: nyāya or method, vaiśeṣika or science, saṅkhya or analysis, yoga or uniting one's consciousness, mīmāṃsā or religious ceremonies and vedānta or conclusive commentaries.
- sākhya: association or friendship with persons in devotion; one of the five direct or primary rasas or manifestations of love that are regarded main rasas: the fraternal or friendly mood of devotion.
- śakti: energy, power, force.
- samādhi: uninterrupted state of self-realization by meditation, meditative absorption; eighth limb of the eightfold yoga (see Patañjali).
- sampradāya: spiritual tradition.
- sāṅkhya-yoga: the yoga of analytical divisions.
- saṁsāra: the cycle of birth and death, material existence.
- sāṅkhya: the analytic and categorizing form of thought, a form of yoga, a basic philosophy of India (see ṣaḍ-darśana).
- saṁskāra: purification ritual for spiritual rebirth - there are twelve of them - applicable to the first three varṇas, that is to say, not the laborer class of the śūdra (see there).
- Sanaka: the eldest of the four Kumāras.
- Śankarācārya: the great monist of India.
- sannyāsa: the renounced order, see varṇāśrama.
- sannyāsī: preacher renouncing the world.
- Śatarūpa: consort of Svāyambhuva.
- sat: the real, the true, the goodness, the essence.
- sat-saṅga: association of and with devotees.
- sattva: one of the guṇas (see there).
- sat-guṇa: the six qualities of material existence: hunger, thirst, grief, old age, illusion and death (see also ṣaḍ-ūrmi).
- ṣaḍ-ūrmi: the six sat-guṇa forms of material misery as six 'waves' of the material ocean. Also known as the so-called four forms of misery: birth, disease, old age and death.

- Satya-yuga: also called Kṛtā-yuga, the first and holiest in the cycle of the four cosmic ages.
- Self (ātma): Kṛṣṇa as both being the Paramātmā (see there) and the Supreme Brahman (see there); the primal foundation of everything that is, the Soul of all souls, equal to them in quality but unequal as for His omnipresent quantity.
- siddhānta: the final conclusion, dogma, established opinion, meaning or doctrine of a teaching. In Kṛṣṇa-consciousness the final conclusion is maintained that Kṛṣṇa is the Supreme Personality of Godhead.
- Siddha: yogi who has acquired the so-called perfections, siddhis.
- siddha-yoga: yoga for acquiring special abilities.
- siddhi: perfections, mystical potencies, spiritual assets that possibly constitute a hindrance in self-realization (see chapter 10: 5-6).
- Śiva: spouse of Durgā, Lord of the material world, emanation of Viṣṇu, one of the three guṇa-avatāras. Lord of destruction, known for his merciful nature.
- Śrī: the goddess of fortune, eternal female companion of Viṣṇu, Lakṣmī (see there).
- Śrī Śrī Śikṣāṣṭaka: the only eight verses composed by Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu (see them as a bhajan at bhagavata.org)
- Skanda: the god of war.
- śloka: Sanskrit verse.
- Śrīmad Bhāgavatam: the great purāṇa about Kṛṣṇa of which this book is a part of Canto 11. One considers this book the embodiment of the Lord Himself.
- Śrīla Madhvācārya (1238-1317): one of the important philosophers of the bhakti movement. He promulgated the Dvaita school of vedānta philosophy (of a strict distinction between the Supersoul and the individual soul).
- śrīvatsa: a couple of white hairs on the chest of the Supreme One, where Śrī rests Her head.
- śruti: 'hearing, listening'; that what is handed down orally, the four Vedas including the Upaniṣads, the philosophical treatises.
- sthita-prajña: someone stable in wisdom.
- Sudarśana: a vidyādhara who by Kṛṣṇa was liberated; the disc weapon of the Supreme Lord (see also cakra).
- śūdra: member of the laborer class, the servants (see varṇa).
- Sugrīva: ape-like devotee of the avatāra Rāma (see there).

- Śukadeva: the speaker of the Śrīmad Bhāgavatam, son of Vyāsa.
- Śukrācārya: the teacher of the demigods.
- Supersoul: Paramātmā (see there).
- Sūrya-namskar (sūryanamskāra): a greeting of the sun in a series of postures, of yoga āsanās that combined result in an obeisance to the sun (see also Gāyatrī).
- Svāmī Prabhupāda, A.C. Bhaktivedanta: the Vaiṣṇava paramparā ācārya who brought this book to the West; leader of the Hare Kṛṣṇa-movement ISCKON, commentator of the sacred books of India.
- svarūpa: character, nature, identity, someone's actual form or nature of service.
- Svāyambhuva: the first Manu.
- Śvetadvīpa: the White Island where Viṣṇu resides.

T

- tamas: one of the guṇas (see there).
- tantras: supplemental, explanatory Vedic scriptures containing detailed instructions.
- tattva: basic element, true state, truth, principle, reality.
- tapas: renunciation.
- tapoloka: the world of renunciation, of penance; one of the heavenly worlds.
- tilaka: mark of sacred clay on the forehead, the arms and trunk.
- Tretā-yuga: the second cosmic age of great Vedic sacrifices (see yuga).
- tridaṇḍa: the staff of a traveling monk consisting of three separate sticks representing the control over his words, his thoughts and his actions.
- tridaśa: thirty different gods that are worshiped (see further bhagavata.org)
- trikālika: the threefold nature of time in the sense of past, present and future.
- trikāṇḍa yoga: threefold yoga, knowing karma-, jñāna and bhakti yoga; karma yoga constitutes the way, bhakti yoga constitutes the shop and jñāna yoga shows the spiritual purchases one can obtain there.
- turīya: the fourth state of consciousness one reaches by meditation next to the three of sleeping, waking and dreamless sleep (see also Kṛṣṇa-consciousness).

U

- Uddhava: Kṛṣṇa's nephew, intimate friend and servant in Mathurā and Dvārakā. The great devotee of Kṛṣṇa for whom this Gītā was spoken.
- Upaniṣads: philosophical additions to the Vedas (see śruti).
- ūrdhva retah: 'the seed that goes upwards', internal drive because of sexual renunciation, characteristic of celibate sages.
- Urvaśī: heavenly courtesan who married with King Purūravā with whom she had six sons (9.15: 1).
- uttama: ('highest, most elevated') devotion at the highest level; to recognize Kṛṣṇa in all and everything. Kṛṣṇa Himself is Puruṣottama, the Supreme Person.
- Uttamaśloka: Lord Kṛṣṇa as the one of the greatest fame, He who is mentioned in the verses.

V

- Vaikuṅṭha: heaven, the spiritual world, where there is no indolence, foolishness, stupidity, laziness, or fear; the ultimate position of self-realization in the here-and-now.
- vairāgya: detachment.
- vaiśya: member of the third vocational group, of farmers, businessmen and other independent professionals (see varṇa).
- Vaiṣṇava: Viṣṇu monk, adherent of Vaiṣṇavism, in the West known as the Hare Krishna movement that in fact constitutes but one of the many schools of Vaiṣṇavism.
- Vaiṣṇavism: the teaching of the worshippers of Viṣṇu, there are different schools.
- Vāmana: an avatāra of Viṣṇu.
- vamśa: dynasty.
- vānaprastha: third phase of life within the varṇāśrama-system, in which one leaves one's family behind and performs austerities in solitude.
- vāntāśī: 'someone who eats his own vomit', term for someone practicing penances for the purpose of superficial sense gratification.
- varṇa: vocational order, the four classes or vocational orders of the varṇāśrama-system (see there).

- varṇāśrama: the social religious system of the four vocational orders or classes - brahmin (see there), kṣatriya (see there), vaiśya (see there), śūdra (see there), and the four āśramas, spiritual phases of life or the spiritual departments of brahmācarya (see there), gṛhaṣṭa (see there), vānaprastha (see there) and sannyāsa (see there).
- vāsanā: propensity, innate character trait, the lingering of impressions, of perceptions from the past.
- Vāsudeva: Kṛṣṇa, the son of Vasudeva.
- Vāsukī: the worldly snake with which the gods and demons churned the mountain in the milk ocean.
- Veda: spiritual knowledge, the by Vyāsa in four divided oldest sacred scriptures of the world, to which directly belong the Upaniṣads, and indirectly the Mahābhārata and the Purāṇas.
- Vibhīṣaṇa: a from a demoniac line born servant of the avatāra Rāma (see there).
- vidhi: the four regulative principles based upon the four legs of the bull of dharma: satya, dayā, tapas, śauca; respectively truth, compassion, penance and cleanliness or - in Vaiṣṇavism - no intoxication, no meat eating, no promiscuity and no gambling.
- Vidyādhara: class of lesser demigods standing for the scientists, servants of Śiva.
- Viṣṇu: the maintainer, guṇa avatāra, of goodness, the transcendental four-armed appearance of Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Lord, Nārāyaṇa.
- Viṣṇu avatāras: incarnations of Viṣṇu time and again appearing on earth to fight against the wicked ones, restore the dharma and protect the devotees. There are many of whom the two most widely known are Lord Kṛṣṇa and Lord Rāma who by the Vaiṣṇavas are meditated in one mantra, the so-called Mahāmantra (see there).
- viṣaya: everything perceptible to the senses, the material domain.
- Vraja: the cow village at the river the Yamunā nearby Mathurā, where Kṛṣṇa grew up.
- vṛtti: sustenance, attitude, character, treatment, propensity, functioning, appearing.
- Vṛtrāsura: a gigantic demon.
- Vyāsa: ('he who collected and divided the verses') Dvaipāyana (see there).

Y

- Yadu: the royal family in which Kṛṣṇa appeared on earth as the Son of Vasudeva - and in that sense is named Vāsudeva.
- yakṣa: servant of Kuvera.
- yama: first limb of the eightfold yoga consisting of the rules of austerity, the great vow: ahimsā - nonviolence, satya - truthfulness, asteya - non-stealing, brahmā-carya - chastity, self-restraint, aparigraha - non-greediness (see also vidhi and Patañjali).
- yoga: the science of uniting consciousness. There are three basic forms: upāsana-yoga or bhakti-yoga - the yoga of devotion, karma-yoga - the yoga of voluntary service or nonprofit labor in e.g. sacrificial ceremonies and jñāna-yoga - the yoga of knowledge and meditation.
- yoga-māyā: the magical power of abstract meditation. The mystical inner potency of Lord Kṛṣṇa.
- yuga: the age of Vedic civilization varying from  $1-4 \times 1200 \times 360$  years. Yugas repeat themselves in series of four van named Satya (or Kṛta), Treta, Dvāpara and Kali each shorter than the one before in which the four basic qualities of dharma (see vidhi) diminish more and more. A period of four yugas is named a mahāyuga, lasting 4.32 million years that constitutes 1/1000 of a kalpa, a day of Brahmā.

For matters not included in this glossary, please consult the lexicon to the Śrīmad Bhāgavatam at:
<http://bhagavata.org/glossary/index.html>

Uddhava Gītā

For an online version with pictures and readings of the text in two languages (Nl./Eng.) see:

<http://bhagavata.org>

for the webpage of the translator

<http://bhagavata.org/c/8/AnandAadhar.html>

Production: the Filognostic Association of The Order of Time

<http://theorderoftime.com/info/guests-friends.htm>